Painful memories linger on for Pueblo ex-crewman

RICHARD ROGALA, a crewman aboard the USS Pueblo when it was captured by the North Koreans eight years ago, was decorated for his valor. He remembers the incident and thinks its lessons should be too.

by JOE SWICKARD

They hoped they wouldn't be forgotten and now at least one of them would just as soon have the whole thing slip into the background.

In this age of euphemisms, eight years have passed since the "incident" — the capture of the United States naval vessel, the U.S.S. Pueblo, by the North Koreans.

It is eight years, thousands of miles and a distance that cannot be measured since Jan. 23, 1968, when five North Korean gunboats and two airplanes forced the Pueblo and its 83 crewmen into captivity.

"I WAS WELL aware of the date," said Richard Rogala. "I looked at the calendar and I was instantly aware of it."

Rogala was a member of the crew and suffered the 11-month imprisonment by the North Koreans. Now, at 29, he is a Schaumburg resident and a buyer for National Foods in Rosemont.

Today, he has a secretary who answers his phone for him. Eight years ago the North Koreans were beating and humiliating him.

Eight years after the beatings and torture, he said "It's pretty well forgotten by most people now."

The Rev. Paul Lindstrom, pastor of the Church of Christian Liberty in Prospect Heights, was not going to let the incident fade from public view then. He organized the "Remember the Pueblo Committee" to get the men freed.

TODAY ROGALA said he's of two minds about whether it still should be remembered.

"Sometimes, I'd just as soon forget about it. It happened and it's over. It's gone," Rogala said.

The experience provided personal lessons for him — about his strengths and his weaknesses. It taught a good lesson to the country, he said.

"The country learned and remembered when the Mayaguez thing happened. We learned we had to go in and get those guys. We said we were going to do that because of what happened before," he said.

Last May, shortly after the fall of Cambodia to Communist forces, the United States merchant ship Mayaguez was seized by Cambodians in international waters. Within days, the Marines launched assaults and the ship and its crew were freed.

INCIDENTS such as the Mayaguez will set off his memory and the memories of others.

He and the other Pueblo crewmen were released Dec. 23, 1969. The months after his release and discharge from the Navy five months later were hectic.

"The first six months I got lots of speaking offers from all over. Most of them I couldn't accept, there were just too many of them. Then it just died off," he said.

IN 1974, HE RECEIVED a call from the Navy. Did he want to pick up his decoration in person, they asked, or did he want it mailed? It was the first time he had heard of any decorations.

He received the Navy Commendation Medal at a ceremony in Forest Park. Today, it takes him a moment to recall the exact title of the decoration.

Some crew men were reluctant to accept the award, but not Rogala.

"I accepted it and I was grateful for it," he said.

He is now married and the father of a daughter. If he had a son and it came time for that son to go off to sea, would it bother him?

"No," he said. "Not really."

Ryan vetoes 8.3% trash charge hike

by BILL HILL

Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan has vetoed garbage rate increases of 8.3 per cent, saying he will not accept any rate hike above 5 per cent.

Ryan said any increase over the 5 per cent annual adjustment guaranteed in the village's exclusive, five-year contract with Laseke Disposal "is unwarranted and unwise at this time."

A spokesman for Laseke Disposal said Ryan's veto was another instance of "press agentry," of which Ryan was accused by Trustee Alice Harms when she resigned Monday.

THE EXTRA 3.3 per cent increase recommended by the village's finance committee and approved Jan. 19 by the village board is to reimburse Laseke for increased dumping charges at the Wauconda landfill. The committee and board rejected requests from Laseke to also be reimbursed for increased fuel and postage costs and higher social security payments.

Under the proposal approved 7 to 2 by the board, the cost of residential pickup would go from $5.39 to $5.84. The commercial rate schedule would be $4.05 per cubic yard, and schools would be charged $2.54.

A two-thirds vote of the village board is needed to overturn Ryan's veto.

Ryan said that the 5 per cent annual increase provision in the contract is intended to cover increased costs of operation. He said the increased dumping charges "are not unusual charges in the cost of doing business, particularly where, as we have here, a disposal company is involved.

"IT IS MY JUDGMENT that in providing an automatic 5 per cent increase, the village board intended to insulate the community from annual increases in garbage fees which might otherwise reflect the fluctuations in operating costs that any business must anticipate," Ryan said.

"To permit increases in excess of the 5 per cent is to defeat the purpose of the contract and its benefits to the residents. This is not a contract which calls for an automatic reimbursement to Laseke for every increase in costs which he incurs," he said.

Laseke representatives have threatened to test in court the meaning of the "unusual changes in the cost of doing business" clause since Dec. 29, when the finance committee rejected Laseke's requests for additional reimbursements.

"Mr. Ryan, being an attorney, should know that reimbursement for increased dumping charges is definitely specified in the contract," said Les Ploetz, a consultant and spokesman for Laseke.

AMY DOE, the newborn baby abandoned in the lost and found box at St. Edna's Church, is at Northwest Community Hospital. Amy, held by Margaret Cwik, is reported in good condition. Arlington Heights Det. Mike Hogan is seeking information on the child's identity.

Choir practice a lucky break for infant

Deserted newborn cradled in church lost and found

by JOE SWICKARD

An abandoned newborn girl, wrapped in a dish towel, was discovered in the lost-and-found box at St. Edna Catholic Church in Arlington Heights.

The baby, only 12 hours old when found by a parishioner, was wearing a gauze diaper and covered with a terry cloth towel. A spokesman for Northwest Community Hospital, where the baby was taken by Arlington Heights Fire Dept. paramedics, said she is listed in good condition.

Charles Reinhold, a parishoner, discovered the baby when he arrived to open the church, 2535 N. Arlington Heights Rd., for choir practice shortly after 8 p.m. Thursday.

The baby's cries attracted Reinhold to the storage room near the front of the church. The child was in a cardboard box used to collect lost or forgotten items at the church.

REINHOLD SAID, "I was just going to open the safety doors when I heard the baby yelling. That's what attracted me."

He said, "I was kind of shocked, she just had a towel wrapped around her . . . Finding babies is not my line."

Reinhold, a father of five, said, "when they're that old, I usually only see them behind the glass partition at the hospital."

No notes or other items, other than the multicolor dish towel, were found by police.

A SPOKESMAN FOR Northwest Community Hospital, said the child, named Amy Doe, was about 12 hours old when she was found. The spokesman said Amy's umbilical cord had not been tied.

Police said there was no indication the child had been born at the church.

Police said that they have no leads to the identity of Amy's mother. They ask anyone with information to contact them at 253-2340.

The Rev. James Dougherty, of St. Edna's, said, "It's just very fortunate that there was choir practice or else the baby would never have been found in time."

THE TEMPERATURE of the room where Amy was found was 53 degrees, police said. The hospital reported Amy's temperature was 91.4 degrees when she was admitted.

The hospital spokesman said Amy's temperature indicated she had not been in the room long before her discovery.

The hospital described Amy as a caucasian, 19 inches long, weighing 7 pounds, 1 ounce, with dark hair.

Rev. Dougherty said the church was unlocked from 10 a.m. to 7:20 p.m. Thursday. A side entrance shared by the church and the parish hall, was unlocked after that because a Boy Scout troop was meeting in the hall.

A SCOUT TOLD police two cars were seen in the church parking lot about 6 p.m. One car was described as an older blue Ford LTD.

Rev. Dougherty said the car in question could belong to a person stopping to pray at the church.

"Its not unusual for someone to come in and pray," the priest said.

He said someone could have entered the church without being seen or heard by persons in the parish hall.

CUSTODY OF AMY was awarded to the Illinois Dept. of children and Family Services by the juvenile court Friday on a petition by the Arlington Heights police. The baby will be turned over to the agency Monday.

Amy will remain at the hospital for tests and X-rays. The hospital said there was a slight swelling above her eye, but it was not known whether it was the result of birth or an accident.

Reinhold said, "The main thing is that the baby is all right and gets the proper care. I hope the poor kid gets a chance after this."

Apartment rents to go up in spring

by LEA TONKIN

Northwest suburban apartment dwellers can expect 3 to 8 per cent rent hikes, if their leases are coming up for spring renewal.

A Herald survey of four area apartment specialists shows the rent increases are generally lower in surrounding suburbs than North Shore, Gold Coast and Lakeshore areas in Chicago.

Higher operating costs prompted the Friday announcement of Chicago area rent increases, said William Sally, vice president and general manager of Baird & Warner, Inc., property management division. Tenants will pay an average 3.87 per cent higher rent in the Northwest suburbs and northwest side of Chicago, starting May 1, Sally said.

RENT INCREASES are lowest in the Northwest suburbs because of the 12 per cent vacancy rate in apartments managed by Baird & Warner. Sally said Gold Coast and North Shore rents will rise an average 8.74 per cent. Other increases include North and North Shore suburbs, up 7.04 per cent; Oak Park and western suburbs, up 7.94 per cent; near west side, up 4.76 per cent; south and southwest areas, up 6.49 per cent.

"The figures are averages," Sally said. "In some cases, tenants will be getting less or no increases. In others, the increases may be as high as 27.5 per cent, especially if expenses rose dramatically, the tenant had a two-year lease or if competitive factors, such as a new building in the area, kept last year's increase at a low level." Higher fuel, water, labor, insurance, management and other expenses affect rental rates, he said.

THE RENT increases will mean a typical one-bedroom apartment will cost $240 to $260 in the Northwest suburbs and on the northwest side of Chicago, he said. A one-bedroom unit will cost $300 to $330 in the Lake Shore area from the Gold Coast to Devon Ave; $240 to $250 in the western suburbs and $230 in the south and southwest sides and suburbs, he said. The average 7 per cent increase compares to a 6.74 per cent hike a year earlier.

A 3 to 5 per cent rent increase in Northwest suburban apartments is predicted for the spring season by Tracy Hill, vice president of property management for Kimball Hill, Inc., Rolling Meadows. The firm manages some 2,500 area units and another 1,000 apartment units in the south suburbs.

THE HIGH VACANCY rates in the Northwest suburbs slowed down rent increase moves, Hill said. "There's definitely going to be a push for higher rates, because expenses are up," he said. He cited a 20 per cent hike in electric service costs, a 30 to 35 per cent increase in natural gas bills and other operating expense increases.

The $5 to $15 rent cost hikes are not as overwhelming as Near North rental rates, Hill said.

Ambulance, auto collide; one killed

A 69-year-old man was killed and four other persons were injured, including three Schaumburg firemen, when an ambulance and automobile collided at Meacham and Nerge roads, Elk Grove Village, Friday night. Firefighters John Dixon, David Grandt and Martin Coniglio were also injured and were being kept at Alexian Brothers Medical Center for Xrays.

Man dies from gas fumes

A 19-year-old Lake Zurich man died Friday after falling into a gasoline storage tank near Thacker Street and Wolf Road in Des Plaines. Dennis A. Welk apparently died from asphyxiation as a result of breathing gasoline fumes. Welk was a maintenance man for Lake-Cook Farm Supply Co., Des Plaines, which owned the tank. Firemen worked for about two hours to get Welk's body from the 40-foot tank, which had about 6 to 8 feet of gasoline at the bottom. Welk and another man were checking a valve in the tank when the accident occured.

Oil recycling law expected

Legislation requiring recycling of used motor oil is expected to be introduced in the Illinois General Assembly in March based on results of three experimental recycling plants, one of which is located in Des Plaines. The proposal calls for all dealers who sell 500 or more gllons of fuel oil a year to provide collection facilities for spent motor oil. The oil will be recycled and sold as reclaimed motor oil. Officials are backing the legislation based on the success of the voluntary programs. Des Plaines has collected more than 2,100 gallons of oil since May.

Fire routs 100 from condos

A fire early Friday routed 100 residents from the Crystal Towers condominiums in Mount Prospect and caused an estimated $23,000 damage. The fire ignited when two bare electrical wires touched setting off sparks in the seventh floor residence of Carol Cain. Ms. Cain was credited by fire officials with sounding the fire alarm and knocking on doors to wake up other residents to alert them to the fire. No one was injured in the blaze, which was discovered about 3:20 a.m.

New RTA budget 'fishy': Baldino

by LYNN ASINOF

Regional Transportation Authority board member D. Daniel Baldino Friday accused RTA Chairman Milton Pikarsky of making a deal to win speedy board approval of the 1976-77 budget.

"There's something fishy about that budget," Baldino said, citing the hurried consideration of the $185.7 million budget.

The lengthy budget document was presented to the board Thursday with Pikarsky calling for a vote Friday. The budget was approved by a 5-2 vote. Board members James Kemp and Joseph A. Tecson voted against approval.

NOTING THAT $2 million was set aside Friday morning for use in the outlying RTA counties, Baldino said this may have been offered to other board members as a deal. "The only way he could have gotten five votes was if he made a deal," he said, charging $2 million was a cheap price for budget approval.

"There was absolutely no time to consider that document," Baldino said. "It is an insult to the suburbs and, more important, it is just an insult to the tax payers. There is no way that a public official can act responsibly on a $185 million budget with 2 to 3 hours of consideration."

Baldino walked out of the special budget meeting before the vote, saying he had an important prior commitment. He said Pikarsky used an excuse, the absence next week of another board member, to push through Friday's meeting.

"THE BUDGET had to be approved today," Baldino said. "He was willing to trade almost anything. He was willing to make any deal."

Included in the budget is $198,000 for four new bus routes in the Northwest suburbs and $13 million in improvements to the Chicago and North Western Ry.

The bus routes are to be funded entirely by the RTA for a six-month period and then evaluated to determine whether service should continue, be altered or discontinued.

The routes include:

- Local feeder service to the Arlington Heights train station: $25,000.
- Feeder service from Rolling Meadows to Palatine: $50,000.
- Commuter service from the Jefferson Park rapid transit station to Elk Grove Village: $50,000.
- Regional service between Evanston and Schaumburg: $73,000.

The specifics of the routes have not been mapped by the RTA staff. The buses are to be in service before June 30, 1977.

Improvements to the North Western are contingent on the approval of a purchase of service contract with the railroad. In November, the railroad broke off contract negotiations with the RTA, charging the proposed agreement was "repressive and regressive."

Board member Richard D. Newland Friday said every effort now is being made to get the North Western back into negotiations, and he is hopeful that a contract can be approved.

North Western improvements in the budget include:

- Maintenance of passenger cars: $1,814,000.
- Rebuilding of 14 locomotives; $2,477,000.
- Replacement of five railroad crossings: $90,000.
- Layover facility at the Chicago passenger terminal: $115,000.
- Installation of new toilets: $60,000.
- Rail maintenance, including tie replacement, track work, installation of security, replacement of crossing gates, and ballast replacement: $7,986,000.

Also included in the budget is the purchase of 127 new buses for suburban areas at a cost of $8,255,000. Distribution has not been determined.

Funds for the revision of carrier schedules are included in the budget so that bus-to-bus and bus-to-train transfers can be made more efficiently and easily.

Based on the proposed figures, the RTA can expect a small surplus of $54,000. Because the budget covers a period nearly 18 months in the future, RTA officials say this figure may change, depending on economic conditions and board actions.

Outside audit proposed for county

by WANDALYN RICE

Cook County should hire outside auditors to check its books rather than relying on the county's appointed auditor, Republican County Comr. Mary McDonald said Friday.

Mrs. McDonald raised the point during the second day of hearings on the county's $172.6 million budget during testimony by John Gallagher, the county auditor appointed by County Board Pres.George W. Dunne.

Mrs. McDonald's proposal drew expressions of outrage from Democratic commissioners, including Jerome Huppert, chairman of the board's finance committee. "Do you want us to duplicate Mr. Gallagher's work?" Huppert asked. "And who audits the outside auditor — did you ever think of that?"

GALLAGHER AUDITS nearly all county departments, except for the county treasurer, county hospital and one or two other sections that hire outside audits.

Mrs. McDonald told Gallagher her request for an outside audit "has nothing to do with questioning anybody's honesty. It's just if you are appointed by the president and are auditing the president's departments, there really is no check. You are subject to discipline by the president and you are auditing his accounts."

When Gallagher replied he felt no pressure because of his appointment by Dunne, Mrs. McDonald said, "We shouldn't forget Orville Hodge (the state auditor who went to jail because of crimes committed in his office)."

The remark led Gallagher to protest, "When you talk about Orville Hodge, I get sensitive."

Earlier, the county board heard a spirited defense from Chief Circuit Court Judge John Boyle for the practice of assigning personal bailiffs to circuit court judges. The bailiffs, who are Sheriff's Police deputies chosen by the judges, have frequently drawn criticism.

THE PERSONAL BAILIFFS, Boyle said, "are mor important than the court bailiffs because of increasing threats to the lives of judges from criminals they have sentenced to prison. "The bailiff is the judge's man and if anything happens to the judge, he loses his job," Boyle said. "You know he's going to protect the judge."

Boyle also said he would like to change the system for calling jurors so they could serve near their homes. Presently jurors are paid $15 a day and $1.10 for transportation. "We had a juror from Robbins who had to serve in Schaumburg and it cost her $4.20 a day just to get there," Boyle said.

Such a change, Boyle said, would require action by the legislature.

Also Friday, county board members were told changing Dunne's budget to provide 5.5 per cent cost of living raises for county employes would result in a property tax increase of four cents per $100 assessed value.

Dunne has provided for no cost of living raises in the budget, despite protests from some county employes, including county jail guards.

No natural gas shortage despite cutbacks: utility

The surprise announcement of cutbacks in natural gas deliveries by the Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America will not force a curtailment in area service, said Northern Illinois Gas Co.

Natural Gas Pipeline Co. Thursday announced a plan to reduce natural gas deliveries to 49 utilities in Illinois, Indiana and Iowa. The reason cited for the cutback was the Federal Power Commission's delay in approving a proposed increase in Natural's storage gas withdrawal authorization.

THE PIPELINE company is a major supplier to NI-Gas, Peoples Gas Light and Coke Co., North Shore Gas Co., Illinois Power Co. in Decatur, Central Illinois Light Co. in Peoria and other Midwest utilities. Natural Gas is a subsidiary of Peoples Gas Co., Chicago.

C. J. Gauthier, NI-Gas chairman and president, said, "NI-Gas and other Natural customers have been absorbing summer curtailments in order for the pipeline to store gas to offset declining winter deliveries to it from gas producers It is incomprehensible that the power commission would not allow this gas to be used as intended."

The replacement of pipeline gas with fuel such as propane and supplemental natural gas could cost up to $30 million, Gauthier said. "But we will do what we have to do to ensure the uninterrupted service to all NI-Gas customers at the lowest possible cost," he said.

3 judges assigned to malpractice unit

The growing number of medical malpractice cases in Cook County has forced Chief Circuit Court Judge John S. Boyle to quadruple the number of judges assigned to hear malpractice cases.

Boyle announced Thursday the formation of a special section devoted exclusively to malpractice cases within the law division of the Circuit Court.

Judges Minor K. Wilson, John C. Fitzgerald and Jacques F. Heilingoetter will join Judge David A. Canel in the special unit.

Last June Canel became the first judge appointed to hear malpractice cases fulltime.

Canel will be the presiding judge of the unit and assign cases to the other three judges.

Court officials said there are 1,603 malpractice cases pending in the county courts filed by plaintiffs seeking a total of $656,463,471.

Nixon agrees to answer Senate queries in writing

by DANIEL F. GILMORE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Richard M. Nixon has agreed to answer under oath written questions from the Senate intelligence committee about his decisions on intervention in Chile and other matters, Chairman Frank Church said Friday.

Church, D-Idaho, told reporters after a closed session of the panel that the answers to the questions will be presented to the committee "for whatever action may be necessary."

Church also said the committee decided unanimously not to call Frank Sinatra to testify on what he might know about Mafia-CIA connections in assassination plots against Cuban leader Fidel Castro and others.

"The committee believes it has all the facts in connection with Mafia connections and there is no reason to pursue the matter," Church said.

THE HOUSE intelligence committee, meanwhile, approved by a 9-4 vote a final report on its investigations of abuses by the U.S. intelligence community, including highly classified material despite White House objections.

The Senate committee has been trying for months to get sworn testimony from Nixon on various intelligence aspects of his administration that came under scrutiny.

At one point last year, the former president offered to receive at his San Clemente, Calif., residence a deputation of "two senior members" — presumably Church and vice chairman Sen. John Tower, R-Tex. — for a period of several hours and answer questions under oath.

But Nixon, through his attorney, said he received the right to refuse to answer under executive privilege any question he judged unacceptable. The committee turned down the offer.

CHURCH SAID Nixon's attorney had since informed the committee the former president would be willing to provide sworn answers to written questions from the panel. And since the committee's assignment runs out at the end of February, Church said, "this would be acceptable."

"The interrogation will be prepared by the staff, approved by me and Sen. Tower" and sent to Nixon with a request they be "answered expeditiously," Church said. After the answers are in, he said, "The committee may want him to answer more questions," he said.

Church said the committee wanted to obtain the reasons and circumstances surrounding Nixon's decisions to have the CIA try to prevent the election of Marxist Salvador Allende as Chile's President.

Lebanon 'progressives' burn town

DAMOUR, Lebanon (UPI) — The "progressive forces" in Lebanon's civil war burned the Christian town of Damour to the ground Friday, leaving the blackened wreckage as a monument to about 50 massacred men, women and children.

Reports of the massacre came as officials in Beirut said the Syrian-backed truce had taken a fragile hold in Lebanon calling the cease-fire "the 1,000-mile trek to build a new nation" from the ruins of civil war.

Palestinian and Moslem gunmen laughed, screamed and fired bursts of bullets into the air in Damour as they ran from house to house, looting and burning the once prosperous resort town of 25,000.

"We're just helping the Christians by saving their belongings before the fire gets here," one Moslem looter joked to a reporter who drove to Damour, 25 miles south of Beirut on the Mediterranean coast.

NEXT TO THE road lay a bloodied shoe with a severed foot still inside — a grim reminder of the slaughter of some 50 men, women and children who refused to leave their homes as the leftists advanced on Damour.

Gruesome traces of the massacre lay about the streets — the still-smoldering remains of two charred bodies in a doorway, a heap of bloodied scalps in a gutter.

At the outskirts of the town, a hand-scrawled sign on a wooden post announced that Damour had been "liberated by the progressive forces."

The massacre, apparently in reprisal for a bloody Christian attack on the Beirut slum district of Karantina earlier in the week, was the latest in a series of atrocities by both sides in the war.

Friday, three days after Damour was overrun at the end of a two-week siege, hundreds of gunmen were still busy carrying off their spoils and bringing in truckloads of kerosene to set the looted homes on fire.

HUNDREDS OF Moslem families streamed up from Sidon and down from Beirut to join the gunmen in grabbing a free carpet, a new refrigerator or a barely used crib.

By afternoon, flames engulfed more than half the town in swirls of black smoke. Some looters panicked, creating traffic jams as they streamed out of town. Tempers flared, fistfights erupted and gunmen fired warning shots.

With the looters gone, Damour stood as a testament to the blind hatred that has pitted Moslem against Christian in Lebanon's nine-month-old civil war.

The Lebanese people may rebuild their war-scarred cities, towns and villages, but it seems unlikely that any cease-fire can paper over the abiding hatred borne of such massacres.

"We will get them back," said one of the 10,000 Damour residents evacuated by army helicopters and boats before the town's fall. "We will have our revenge and do the same to them."

'Dreaded' draft out of business

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The draft, which for nearly three decades haunted the lives of young men and provided the nation with a continuous pool of soldiers, went out of business Friday.

Selective Service Director Byron V. Pepitone, who presided over the agency's dwindling peacetime responsibilities, announced the cancelling of the 1976 lottery drawing, which assigns men induction priorities, and said young men turning 18 will no longer have to even register for the draft.

Although President Ford temporarily suspended registration last April and actual inductions stopped in 1972, Selective Service had initiated plans for an annual one day registration and continuation of the lottery drawings.

The end of the draft came as a result of the move to the all-volunteer army and drastic cuts in the Selective Service's budget. For fiscal year 1977, the administration is asking only a housekeeping $6 million, down from the $28 million the agency now spends.

"THERE IS NO need for a lottery drawing this year due to the incomplete registration of the 1957 year-of-birth group," Pepitone said. "As a result of the reorganization and reduction in force that soon will be effective all registrant processing will terminate."

That means that for the first time since 1948, young men turning 18 will not have to report to their local draft board for registration or wait the annual lottery drawing to find out how close to possible induction they are.

In its 28-year history, the Selective Service System registered a total of 50,623,715 persons and some 4,894,462 were inducted into the armed forces.

The big year for the so-called peacetime draft — the system was in effect during World War II but suspended for some 13 months following the end of the war — was in 1951, during the Korean "police action" when 551-770 draftees were inducted.

FOR THE MOST part, young men accepted registering for the draft as a normal part of their life and a draft card was almost synonomous with a high school diploma.

But during the Vietnam war, resistance to the draft grew and several thousand young men — the exact numbers have never been verified — refused induction, fled to Canada or committed other Selective Service violations.

During that period, however, the agency registered 17,178,895 young men, and 1,759,234 were inducted.

The agency's staff will be cut from its present level of 2,000 to approximately 100. The staff will continue to manage the Reconciliation Service Program — the alternate service component of Ford's conditional clemency program.

Pepitone said the staff will be ready to reinstate the draft if the president believes it necessary.

Soviet-armed Angolan troops march along coast

Soviet-armed Angolan troops and Cuban support units marched north along Angola's Atlantic coast Friday for a possible blockade of ships from the pro-Western supply port of Matadi in Zaire, diplomatic sources said. Reports reaching Lusaka said another assault force of the Marxist Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola dug in Friday along a river in central Angola for an all-out offensive against the southern strongholds of pro-Western forces.

Communist chief vows to continue struggling

Portuguese Communist leader Alvaro Cunbal conceded Friday his party is probably the most orthodox, Soviet-line political group in Western Europe. The outspoken general secretary of Portugal's Communist party also vowed to keep on struggling for "the socialist revolution" and "the liquidation of capitalism" in the country. Cunhal said he was against "opportunist and reformist positions," but he went on to say he favors elections in Portugal. In an interview last year, he played down the importance of elections. He said he feels liberty and democracy are in danger in the country. He cited a wave of recent bombings, apparently by rightists, against Communist targets.

Chinese passenger plane crash reported

A Chinese passenger plane enroute from Peking crashed just before landing at Shanghai airport, killing everyone aboard, the Danish Foreign Ministry in Copenhagen said today. "We received the information through our embassy in Peking which had been notified that two Danish businessmen on the flight had been killed in the crash," the spokesman said. He said the number of passengers was not known but that the plane was a "regular passenger plane which usually means quite a lot of people."

Sanford steps out of presidential race

Terry Sanford stepped out of the crowded race for the Democratic presidential nomination Friday saying he'd concluded he couldn't win and wasn't interested in becoming a "broker" of delegate votes at the national convention. The former North Carolina governor, who had criticized the news media for paying more attention to polls than the issues, said, "The ordeal of running a political campaign from a non-political position is tougher than I anticipated."

Sam Jaffe, who conceded he informed for the FBI while employed by the networks, said he has leanred from several sources there is a list of between 40 and 200 reporters who have supplied information to U.S. intelligence agencies. Harris' trial may be postponed

The kidnap, assault and robbery trial of William and Emily Harris, Symbionese Liberation Army members and companions of Patricia Hearst, may be postponed from its scheduled Feb. 2 date, it ws announced Friday. Judge Mark Brandler made the announcement during a pretiral hearing after deputy public defender Edward Rucker said his request to be removed as advisory counsel to William Harris would be heard by the State Supreme Court next Wednesday.

Wholesale coffee prices raised

The nation's largest coffee wholesaler raised prices Friday in a move that is expected to trigger higher retail prices on the supermarket shelf. General Foods boosted prices an average 15 cents a pound for regular coffee and 2 cents an ounce for instant. Many retail outlets use coffee as a loss leader, selling the product only slightly above the wholesale price. A General Foods spokesman attributed the latest price increase to the severe frost which damaged Brazil's 1976 coffee crop in July. Brazil, the world's largest producer of coffee, supplies about 60 per cent of all U.S. coffee imports.

Dist. 21 returns to basics for brighter future

by MARILYN MCDonald

Children may get more enjoyment from reading, writing and arthmetic in Wheeing-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 schools from now on. And parents and grandparents may be spending more time in the schools, helping with school programs and learning how to be educators at home.

It's all part of Dist. 21's Focus on Basics, a year-long theme and project undertaken by administrators, teachers and parents last spring to get people excited about the rudiments of education — the three Rs.

But the focus goes beyond the "back to basics" philosophy so popular across the country today. Focus on Basics also recognizes the student's self-image and eagerness to learn are products of a good school program.

THE FOCUS ON BASICS committee gave its preliminary report to the Dist. 21 Board of Education Thursday after nearly a year of study and planning. What they've planned is nothing really new — just a conscious rededication to goals the district always had.

"Our theme is not back to basics, but focus on basics, because we're not saying we've left or should avoid affective (humanistic) education," said Supt. Kenneth Gill last year as the committee began its work. "We want to look at certain basic things that aren't left out."

Early in its work, the committee surveyed teachers, administrators and parents to find out what they thought was important for children to learn. The overwhelming first choice was the three Rs. Adults ranked basic social skills of getting along with others second and respect for life, school, adults, authority, property, peers and self, third.

Adults also ranked developing self confidence, fourth; intelligent self-expression, fifth; learning to think and reach decisions, sixth; and basic cultural knowledge, seventh.

THE COMMITTEE also surveyed sixth and eighth graders about what was important to them. Students in both grades said wanting to learn was the most important thing to them. Sixth graders ranked getting along with others second and knowing math skills third. Eighth graders ranked learning to think and reach decisions, second, and getting along with others third.

Committee members have proposed specific programs to make sure the community survey goals would be met. Administrators will help by sponsoring seminars, identifying specialists in each building and aides in the community to help with reading, science, math and social studies.

Principals will coordinate the basics program in each building. Workshops, led by teachers, will show parents how to help children develop their basic skills at home.

Teachers will communicate with parents more often through notes, classroom newsletters and sending home samples of student work. Teachers also want to involve parents with school in the evenings through open houses, family playnights, parent-teacher sharing nights and PTA workshops.

CHILDREN ALO have a role in the Focus on Basics program. They can help younger students with reading, writing and arithmetic, invite parents to visit their schools, and improve their reading skills by reading for pleasure during special reading days at school.

The parents on the Focus on Basics committee agreed to work on strong communication links between home and school. They will try to have parent coffees in homes so that school programs can be discussed in a casual atmosphere.

Parents also want to establish Parent Advisory Councils (PACs) in each school and one for the district. These groups are designed to give parents a choice in their school's curriculum. Some PAC's are made up of PTA board members, while other PAC groups are entirely separate from the PTA. The Focus on Basics committee would like to see PAC groups in every school. Some schools now have them.

Sex ed workshop Monday

Cooper Junior High School's sex education workshop for parents, scheduled for last Monday, has been rescheduled this Monday at 7:15 p.m. at the school, 1050 W. Plum Grove Rd., Buffalo Grove.

Correction

Friday's story about Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 financial problems, said that teacher salary costs have risen 19 per cent in just one year.

John Barger, Dist. 21 associate superintendent, said that all school salary costs have risen 19 per cent — including teacher, principal, clerical and teacher aide salaries.

Elk Grove dumps Conant from share of top spot

The Elk Grove Grenadiers went on a 12-point tear to start the second quarter and put enough ground between themselves and the Conant Cougars to pull out their fourth Mid-Suburban League win of the season, 59-49.

The game started like a Xerox of the 37-36 defenders' fantasy that Conant won when the first two teams met. Ron Sulaski, who led the Cougars with 16 points, tipped in a basket as the first quarter ended to give Conant a one point lead.

Then Mark Sass, Dave Hornacek and Mark Smith each hit a pair of hoops and Elk Grove had an 11-point lead at 29-18.

"This game was similar to the Schaumburg game," said Conant's Dick Redlinger, who saw his team slip out of a tie with the Saxons for the South Division lead, "because I think we played a strong first quarter and then fell aart."

Conant's problems were of a multiple variety. They were without starting forward Brian O'Donnell, who was sick; the Elk Grove defense limited the Cougars' shot selection; and Pete Scaffidi, Conant's best outside shooter, did not heat up until the fourth quarter and didn't get his first basket until the second half.

"We really missed O'Donnell inside on the boards," Redlinger commented after his team had been outrebounded 27-21, "and Scaffiddi has got to hit for us to win."

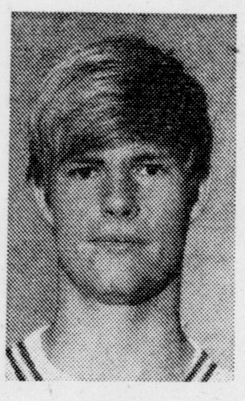
Mike Frisch busted free underneath in the first half for 10 points but he couldn't overcome a 60 per cent Elk Grove shooting spree.

Smith, who is developing into one of the best power forwards in the league, hammered home 18 points to lead Elk Grove and snatched nine rebounds. Hornacek, who was the South Division's second highest scorer going into the game, hit 13, as did Sass.

"We felt the way to beat them," said Elk Grove's Bill Parmentier, "was to take the ball to the baseline. They stopped Hornacek pretty well but that left guys like Smith and Sass open."

SAXONS TRIUMPH

"Oh, to replay those first few minutes."



Bill Wissen

That comment from an obviously disappointed Forest View follower just about summed up the game that might have been, but not quite.

Except for an early 14-2 spurt by Schaumburg, Forest View's determined Falcons might have managed one of the area's bigger surprises of the current basketball season.

Instead, a second half charge fell short and the favored Saxons prevailed, 56-52, at Forest View.

Consolation may be of little solace to a losing team, but winning coach Joe Breault had nothing but praise for the Forest View players and Falcon coach Ted Wissen.

"They were very determined out there tonight and worked very hard. They deserved every one of these 52 points. He's done a great job with that team, a great job."

As for his own Saxons, now 15-2 overall and alone atop the MSL South with a 6-1 mark, Breault pointed to the critical opening surge as the turning point in Forest View's comeback and his team's troubles the rest of the way.

"We took our own momentum away right in the beginning, when we got too deliberate on offense, even with the big lead."

Schaumburg started with a flurry. The Saxons established leads of 8-0 and 14-2 before Forest View could regain its composure.

Three successive drives to the hoop off of slick moves by Falcon guard Bill Simon brought Forest View to within six, at 18-12, at the close of the first quarter.

Both teams slackened the pace a fraction in the second quarter with Schaumburg outscoring the Falcons, 8-6. The Chmiel brothers, center John and guard Ed, contributed all of the scoring for the Saxons in that quarter.

Down 26-18 at the half, Forest View tightened up their defense and battled their rangier opponents fairly even on the boards to close to within four, 36-32, after the third quarter.

Schaumburg moved out to an eight point margin with less than 4:00 minutes to go, before the game Falcons closed it to two on several occasions. The last time was at 52-50 with 4:30 left.

A Forest View foul sent Saxon forward on McIlraith to the line with the bonus in effect. He made both and it was over despite last second baskets by both teams.

WISSEN'S 28 PACES MUSTANGS

Bill Wissen riddled the baskets for a school record 28 points and added 11 rebounds for good measure to power Rolling Meadows past Prospect, 64-50, Friday night.

The 6-foot-7 soft-touch senior center hit a blistering 9-of-12 shots from the floor and clicked on 10-of-13 from the line to shatter the previous Mustang single-game scoring mark of 27 jointly held by grads Len Link and John Hogan.

"I was able to get some operating room tonight," the sandy-haired sharpshooter said. "Normally they pack me in pretty tight, but our guards were hitting from the outside and it relieved some of the pressure underneath."

Wissen, averaging 64 per cent accuracy from the field for the season, was unstoppable on a variety of baseline shots and short jumpers in the lane.

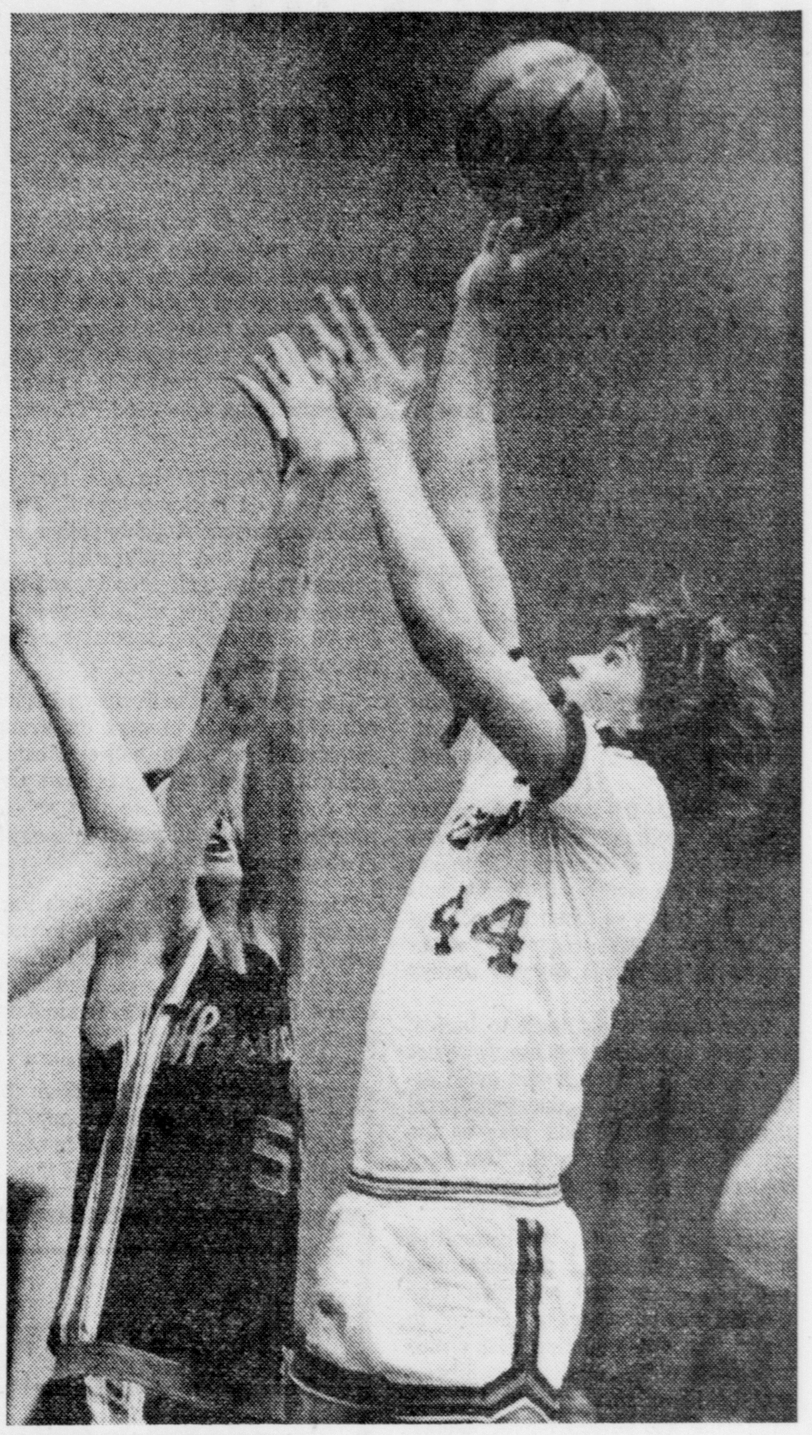
While Wissen was having a field day offensively, the rest of his Mustang teammates were applying a flypaper, man-to-man, full-court press that deprived the Knights the luxury of running their offensive patterns consistently.

"We went to our switching man defense," a satisfied Mustang coach Bill Weinberg said. "The kids were moving pretty well, especially Kenny Breitbeil who shut off their good shooter (Mike) Wood."

Wissen and the South Division's leading scorer Chris Etter locked in a scoring duel in the early going while accounting for the first six points for each team.

But after a 14-14 dead heat in the first period and a seesaw battle through most of the second, Meadows capitalized on a Prospect scoring drought during the final two minutes of the first half and ran up a 34-26 cushion at the intermission.

The Nights never got closer as Wissen duplicated his 14-point first-half total with the help of 10 straight free throws over the final 16 minutes. The triumph bolstered Meadows' record to 3-4 while Prospect, paced by Etter's dozen and 10 by Brad Millar, also stands 3-4.



HEESCH REACH. Buffalo Grove's Fred Heesch (44) launches a high jump shot over the outstretched hands of Wheeling's Keith Schildt during Friday's North Division scuffle on the Bison court. Despite a strong defensive performance by Schildt, Heesch netted nine points to help along an 86-56 triumph by the Grove.

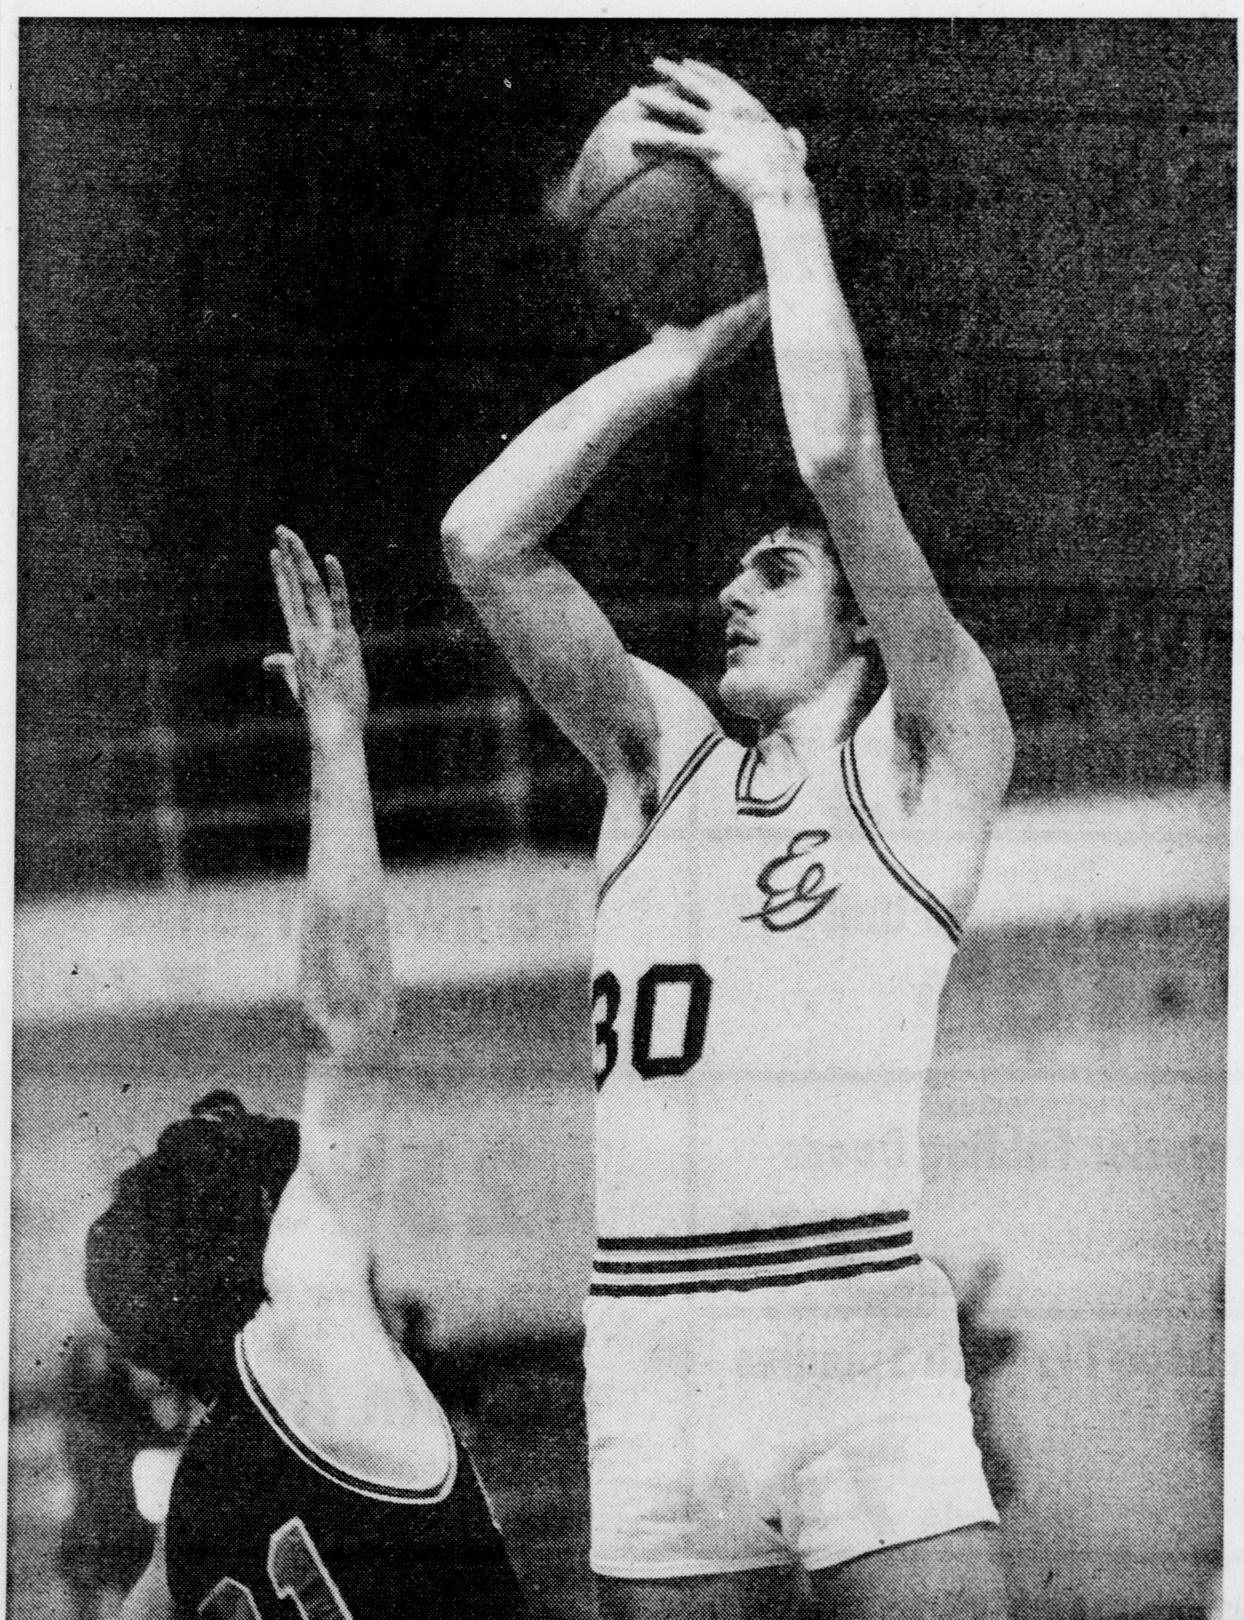
Buffalo Grove rolls to victory



IT'S MONEY in the bank for Elk Grove as Grenadier Dave Hornacek (30) cuts loose over Conant's Rob Totten for two of his 13 points as Elk Grove moved to 4-3 in the MSL South with a 59-49 win.

Buffalo Grove parlayed the hot hands of Tom Stonerook and Mike Ledna into early command over Wheeling and went on to gun down the Wildcats 86-56 in a shootout on the Bison court Friday.

Stonerook and Ledna went on to pace the hosts in scoring as the Grove registered a new school single game scoring mark while keeping their North Division slate unblemished at 5-0. It was their 14th triumph in 17 games over-all.

"There were quite a few outstanding performances out there tonight," beamed Bison coach Paul Grady afterwards. "Keith Schildt played an excellent defensive game for them . . . holding Brian (Allsmiller) to his lowest scoring total for a whole game this season. But we proved to a lot of people that we have other players out there who can get us points."

Ledna connected for 22 points and Stonerook bagged 20, many of them from the 15 foot range, as Buffalo Grove went on to click at a torrid 56 per cent rate afield. In the meantime, Brian Begrowicz was Wheeling's man with the sharp eye and he finished with 20 also to pace the 'Cats in scoring.

There were also a couple of nifty offensive performances from reservists, with Karl Krueger coming off the bench to can 11 for the visitors and George Bastable notching 10 for BG.

And despite the Bison upper hand in the contest from the early monents on, it was an exciting spectator hookup, played with the kind of fierce intensity on both sides usually reserved for championship contests.

Ledna and Stonerook were reponsible for all the home scoring during the first six minutes of the game and their team led 16-8. Allsmiller (who finished with 18) then bucketed three straight to offset a pair of three-point plays by Brian Begrowicz and the Bison led, 22-14, at the end of the quarter.

The closest Wheeling came after that was a 12-point gap late in period three. Schildt finished with 15 points while Allsmiller was credited with 16 rebounds and Scott Groot produced 14 assists for Buffalo Grove.

HUSKIES OUTLAST PALATINE

Kevin McKenna can't do everything.

And for that reason, the Hersey Huskies knocked off McKenna and his Palatine teammates by a score of 65-56 on the Pirates' home court Friday night.

The victory kept Hersey in the thick of the North division race, pushing the Huskies' mark to 4-1 in league play. They're 12-4 in all games. Palatine's record fell to 4-8 as the Pirates dropped their fifth straight North contest.

Despite 30 points from McKenna, mostly from the 15-to-20-foot range, Hersey fought back from a five-point first-quarter deficit and pulled away to lead by as much as 12 in the frantic fourth period.

Senior forward Clyde Glass was the Huskies' top scorer with 25 points, including six straight free throws in the final minute to thwart Palatine's comeback bid. Glass also grabbed 13 rebounds.

Glass got a lot of help from 6-foot-8 senior Jay McDermott, who chipped in with 16 points and 15 rebounds. McDermott hit four baskets in the first quarter when he continually broke free under the hoop.

But the big scoring story again was McKenna, Palatine's 6-6 junior bombardier. The lanky Pirate hit 14 times from the field, each time from the boonies. McKenna led his team with 13 rebounds, too.

Palatine coach Ron Finfrock planned a running attack to shake his team out of the doldrums, and for a while it worked. Ken Ried, who had eight points and 10 rebounds, was clearing the boards and starting the breaks. McKenna and guards Tom Iuorio and Mark McCostlin were hitting from the floor and the Pirates were ahead 21-16.

"McKenna is a helluva ballplayer," said Finfrock. "But because he's picking up all that board work and doing everything else, he's really fatigued by the end of the game."

Hersey, which never trailed after breaking a 33-33 halftime deadlock, got eight points from Tom Frye and eight more from Tom Burzak, who sat out the whole first half because of illness this past week.

ARLINGTON DANCES TO WIN

They aren't the most graceful bunch you'll run into and none will likely appear on American Bandstand, but the Arlington Cardinals did "The Hustle" to near perfection Friday and drove Fremd out of its own gym while they did it, 79-50.

And if coach Don Drain had to award the "Pete Rose Trophy" he'd have to give it to all of his players.

"It was a team effort," Drain says. "I can't emphasize that word more. I think they really hustled and they really worked hard on defense."

And while the Cardinals were running away to their third straight Mid Suburban North win, their defense was producing more Viking turnovers than a toaster oven. When it was over Fremd had turned it over unofficially 23 times.

The Cardinals moved out to a quick 17-6 lead and continued their torrid pace throughout although the Vikings followed suit in the third quarter when the two combined for 48 points. But, by then, the Cards led, 62-40.

Four Cardinals hit for double figures with individual honors going to Jim Grandt who bagged 20 points including 10 free throws. Asserting themselves on both ends of the floor were Greg Kloiber, Frank DiSimone and Tom North who had 18, 15 and 14 points respectively.

Arlington also outrebounded Fremd 38-29 with Grandt also leading that department with 13.

The Cardinals have improved of late because of three factors according to Drain. First he says there has been a ripening of what at first was a green machine. Arlington started the year with no returning varsity lettermen.

Second, the Cardinals are making fewer mistakes and playing much smarter on the floor and finally, the return of Greg Kloiber has made a big difference, Drain says.

Paul Gillette led the losers with 16 points, all from the field. Kerry Field had 10.

Hill leads Crosby; 65 ties record

Dave Hill, claiming a lesson from PGA commissioner Deane Beman turned his game around, shot a Cypress Point course-tying record 65 Friday to forge into the second round lead of the $185,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am in California. The 65, which tied the mark originally set at the course by Bill Nary in the 1949 Crosby, gave Hill a 36-hole score of eight-under 136 and a two-shot leader on Australian transplant David Graham, who shot his second straight 69.

Jack Nicklaus and Mike Morley, who shared the first round lead with 67s at Cypress Point, scrambled to even par 72s at tougher Spyglass Hill for 139 totals, three shots behind the lead.

Brian Allin, Rik Massengale, Hubert Green and Frank Conner were in a group at 142 while Charles Coody and Jerry McGee trailed by another shot. Johnny Miller, who opened with a 74 and a case of the flu, came back with a 77 that left him 15 shots behind Hill. Miller opened the 1976 season by winning at Tucson.

Rough weekend awaits Indiana

Minnesota and Iowa stand as "road blocks" to Indiana's efforts to tie the Big Ten record for consecutive basketball victories at 27, a mark hung up by Ohio State in 1960-62.

The unbeaten and No. 1 ranked Hoosiers, who have won four Big Ten games away from home in six conference decisions this season, first must appear at Minnesota this afternoon and then Monday at Iowa to tie the record. Each game appeared to have the elements for an upset, although Indiana is 6-0 in the Big Ten and 15-0 over-all.

Minnesota, only 2-4 in Big Ten play, will show the Hoosiers' the No. 2 and No. 3 scorers in Big Ten play, Mike Thompson, with a 25.8 average, and Ray Williams, averaging 24.2. Thompson is playing under an injunction deferrig a ruling that he is ineligible because he allegedly sold season cage tickets above the listed price.

The Gophers have lost at home only twice this season, once by one point in overtime to Purdue and then to Iowa by three points, while Iowa, 3-2 in the Big Ten, is unbeaten at home. Both will have the benefit of highly partisan overflow crowds.

In other Big Ten games Saturday the No. 1 scorer in the conference, Terry Furlow, with a 32.7 average, will lead Michigan State at Illinois, Ohio State plays at Iowa, and Wisconsin at Northwestern.

'New George Foreman' debuts

Former heavyweight champion George Foreman will attempt to make his comeback this afternoon in Las Vegas against Ron Lyle. Idle except for the Toronto fiasco involving five opponents, the 27-year-old Foreman will be facing the No. 5 heavyweight on national television.

Foreman, who weighed in at 226 pounds warned fans not to 'doubt me. I made a lot of mistakes before and some people around me made misitakes while they were supposed to be helping me. You're seeing a new George Foreman now."

Lyle, who will turn 34 next month, tipped the scales at 220. "Why should I consider George Foreman any big deal?" said Lyle. "What's to be upst about? What's to be nervous about?" The contender isn't too concerned because last May he went 11 rounds before a technical knockout was recorded by Muhammed Ali. Foreman only lasted eight rounds against the champ.

Wildcat grid stars pass up draft

Northwestern's all time leading ground gainer, tailback Greg Boykin, and All Big-Ten defensive star Pete Shaw, a free safety, have withdrawn their names from the National Football League draft and will play for Northwestern again next year, the school announced Friday. Coach John Pont said he couldn't be happier. "They are All-American in the truest sense," he said.

Both players missed the 1974 season, Boykin with a broken leg and Shaw with a severe knee strain, and had one more year of eligibility. Both were eligible for the pro draft.

Connors advances to semifinals

Jimmy Connors and Roscoe Tanner, the only seeded players left in the $50,000 Birmingham International Indoor Tennis Tournament, earned places in the semifinal round with easy victories Friday . . .

Third-seeded Harold Solomon made short work of Australian Ross Case to advance to the semi-finals of the $50,000 Baltimore International Indoor Tennis Championships along with Eddie Dibbs and Tom Gorman . . .

Former Detroit Lions' defensive back Dick LeBeau was named as the new secondary coach of the Green Bay Packers . . .

Former ABA and NBA player Zelmo Beaty was named to replace Bill Musselman as the Virginia Squires' third head coach this season. Musselman resigned Tuesday night after recording a 4-19 record this season . . .

The Organizing Committee for the 1976 Summer Olympics COJO Friday named Michael Guay as interim vice-president to replace the seriously injured Simon St.-Pierre. St.-Pierre, 41, fell while horseback riding in Bromont, Que., last Sunday and suffered a cerebral hemorrhage. He has not come out of a coma since a five-hour operation last Sunday . . .

Uncertainty over where the Giants will be located has thrown the entire 1976 National League schedule into limbo, the league announced. Schedules for the whole season are usually worked out in the quiet months following the previous season and announced well in advance of spring practice.

In fact, the National League tentative schedule was already prepared. It was to be "officially announced" on Feb. 1.

Unseeded Sue Barker and Terry Holladay scored upsets to move into the semifinals along with top-ranked Chris Evert and Virginia Wade in the Virginia Slims of Washington tennis tournament in Virginia.

Kennedy's basket with :03 left gives West big victory at South

by BOB GALLAS

A dramatic 20-foot basket with three seconds left in the game gave the Maine West Warriors a thrilling 53-52 victory over first-place Maine South at the Hawks' gym Friday night.

Up by five with a little less than two minutes left, the Warriors went into a stall, but three mistakes by West were turned into three quick baskets by the Hawks who took a 50-49 lead with 50 seconds left.

Then West's big center, Buddy Doroskin, brought Warrior fans to their feet as he converted a Hawk turnover into a West bucket to grab a 51-50 lead for Maine West with 27 seconds left.

The Hawks brought the ball downcourt but ended up going to the free throw line as West's Bob Zuccarini fouled out with 11 seconds left in the game.

Maine South's Jim Lee calmly stepped to the line amid a deafening roar from the crowd and pumped in both free throws to give South a 52-51 lead.

West brought the ball in from back court with a pass to Bob Anderson who let fly a full court pass to Pete Karabas, Karabas shoveled the ball to Kennedy at the right baseline, setting up Kennedy's dramatic shot.

The Hawks then tried for a full court pass on the in bounds play to their big center, Russ Schmelzer, whose tip didn't come close to the bucket as the horn sounded.

"I knew it was going in when it left my hand. It felt good," said Kennedy describing his shot in a happy, but subdued Warrior lockerroom after the game.

Warrior coach Gaston Freeman said the final play was not determined in the time out beforehand.

"We very seldom go to one man. It would take up too much time," Freeman said. Freeman added the Warriors had called an offensive play, but never used it as the bucket was scored off the full court press.

The Warriors led at the end of every quarter, but could never put the game away. The lead changed hands eight times, and the game was tied on three occasions.

West, unable to get the ball inside due to the intimidating presence of Schmelzer, used a hot-shooting perimeter offense that was consistently gunning 15-to 20-footers all night.

The win, the second in a row for West over the Hawks after eight seasons without a win over South, could knock the Hawks out of first, pending the outcome of the Niles West game.

West's win knocks the Hawks out of first place into a three-way tie with Maine West and Maine East. All three clubs are 6-2 in the Central Suburban League South behind league leader Niles West at 7-1.

West shot 52 per cent from the field, hitting 26 of 50 attempts while South shot at a 46 per cent clip, hitting 23 of 50 attempts.

There were only 16 fouls called in the well played game. The Warriors went to the line but twice, hitting one of two attempts. South was 6-10 from the line.

Bill Fininis led the Warriors in scoring with 16 points. Kennedy had 13 and Pete Karabas netted 12.

The Warriors stayed in the game despite losing Zuccarini who went to the bench with four personal fouls with 3:20 left in the third quarter. Zuccarini is a key in the West offense and the firey 6-foot-3 guard also helps on the boards.

Zuccarini came back in with 5:46 left to go and the Warriors responsed by opening up a 49-44 lead behind the hot shooting of Fininis who popped in three buckets and Karabas who pumped in two bombs from outside.

Maine West is now 10-7 over-all.

Balance keys St. Viator triumph

by MIKE GARBUS

St. Viator staged a third quarter rally that broke open a tight game and defeated Notre Dame 56-47 Friday night.

The East Suburban Catholic Conference road win boosted the Lions' league record to 5-4, 6-11 over-all, while the Dons fell to 3-6 in the conference and 6-11 over-all.

St. Viator's 6-foot-9 senior center Glenn Girard didn't register his first points of the game until one minute was gone in the third period, but it sparked the Lions to a comeback that erased Notre Dame's 27-23 lead at intermission.

The Dons stingy zone defense kept the Lions from getting the ball inside most of the first half.

Notre Dame deadlocked the Lions at 15 at the end of the first stanza and assumed their slim halftime lead by running when they had the chance and firing over St. Viator's zone.

The Lions also switched to a man-to-man and pressed to stay close, before going inside more on offense in the second half.

After Girard broke his personal drought, guard Ralph Casciaro converted a technical against the Don bench. Girard's jumper was sandwiched around two hoops by Casciaro, and the Lions led 32-31.

The lead changed hands three more times before Girard's three straight free throws and hook after recovering the ball in a wild scramble staked St. Viator to a 39-35 lead that was never to be headed.

The Dons' backs were broken by fouls they committed while trying to press their way back into contention as the fourth quarter ticked away.

St. Viator scored 22 of their points at the free throw line in 29 tries.

Balanced scoring characterized the Lions attack, as Girard, Casciaro and Steve Notaro each finished with 14 points. Paul Wiloff wasn't far behind with 12, eight of them coming from the free throw line.

Wiloff had 10 rebounds for the visitors, who were outboarded by Notre Dame 28-26.

Tim Kolcz's nine rebounds was high for Notre Dame, which was paced scoring by Mike Lepold with 19.

IT BEGINS...Members of Salmon Unlimited and the Illinois Dept. of Conservation submerge rearing cage into Diversey Harbor in Chicago for release of 75,000 chinook salmon.

. . . AND ENDS with this whopping 36-pound king taken by Terry McBurney in Lake Michigan. The four-year life cycle of the chinook should climax this fall to the delight of Illinois anglers.

Experts predict chinook salmon bonanza

The Class of '73 is not a movie sequel to the Summer of '42 or the Class of '44, but it could be the Greatest Show On Earth in the interest of Lake Michigan fishermen.

A report filed by fisheries biologist Harry White of the Illinois Dept. of Conservation this week, indicates the fall run of chinook salmon in 1976 should offer the biggest and best fishing in the brief sportfishing history of Lake Michigan.

White captained a team that surveyed eight inshore sites by collecting fish with monofilament gill nets and 230-volt alternating current boat electrofishing.

Primary site samples were taken between Sept. 4 and Nov. 25, 1975 from catches at Jackson Harbor, Diversey Harbor, Belmont Harbor, the Chicago and Great Lakes Naval Training Center Harbor in North Chicago, the mouth of the Waukegan River in Waukegan and the mouth of Kellogg Creek in Zion.

In addition, tests were conducted at the discharge of the Waukegan power plant in Waukegan and the 59th St. Harbor in Chicago.

The 23 independent surveys resulted in a collection of 295 salmonids representing five species. Each fish was measured for total length and weight, sexed and checked for lamprey wounds or scars and fin clips.

More than one-half of the chinook taken in the sample were Class of '73 salmon. Since the chinook has a normal life cycle of four years, the 1976 fall run should be the most prolific on record.

Fishermen and snaggers enjoyed landing chinook that averaged 12½ pounds and measured 31.7 inches in the fall of '75. In another 9-10 months, these kings are expected to more than double their weight.

The coho salmon story, which represented 90 per cent of the fish caught during the regular 1975 season, is an expectedly bleak one narrated from a tragic outbreak of whirling disease at the Platte River Hatchery in Michigan that destroyed 2.1 million young coho.

Unable to purchase a significant number of coho fry to be stocked into Lake Michigan, organizations such as Salmon Unlimited and the Illinois Dept. of Conservation predict two low-level years of coho fishing ahead.

Other results of the survey indicated that lake trout planted between 1967 and 1970 are returning to their original release site at Great Lakes Harbor.

Unfortunately the water quality, predation and the lake bottom itself, at such stocking areas as Kellogg Creek and the Waukegan River is not conductive for lake trout propagation.

Under consideration are possible offshore plantings of yearling lakers over suitable spawning habitat. It appears that the Illinois ban on taking lake trout will continue, but a decision is expected in February.

Only seven of 64 rainbow trout collected during the survey were mature (3-5 years old) and their largest numbers were taken from the northern sites in mid-November.

The great number of immature steelhead would indicate that most of these fish represent the 230,000 that were released during 1975. The average length of those caught was 25.1 inches and weighed seven pounds.

The devastating lamprey eel, the culprit that decimated the Lake Michigan trout population in the 1950s, is apparently no longer a nemesis.

Lamprey wounding incidence (an indicator of lamprey abundance) was .02 for chinook and a welcomed zero for lake trout.

But with lampreys out of our hair and off of our skin, Lake Michigan anglers are now faced with the polychelorinated biphenyls (PCB) problem which is still under investigation by the Dept. of Public Health.

The chemical, similar in its composition and effects to DDT, is appearing in dangerous quantities in the fatty tissue of the bigger salmon and trout.

Officials suggest that the consumer remove as much of the fatty tissue as possible prior to preparing the fish and to limit consumption to one dinner per week.

It's a bitter pill to swallow, especially with such an exciting forecast for fall-run fishing ahead.

Procrastination begs for disappointment

Fishing tackle needs care now

by VIC WATIA

The fishing season's just around the corner. At least that's what warm weather anglers should be thinking as far as their fishing tackle is concerned.

Each year about this time, outdoor writers like to remind fishermen what they should be doing if they have nothing but time on their hands.

The annual appeal for oiling and repairing reels, checking fishing rods and sorting out lures that are ready for the junk pile has become standard.

Still, it's not a matter to joke about.

There's no better time to get that equipment in shape than now, unless you happen to be one of those fortunate anglers who lives in a warm weather climate where the fishing is good year around.

Some anglers keep their equipment and tackle boxes in tiptop shape all the time. But most don't, letting it gather dust in the trunk of a car, the garage or attic.

Few sporting goods stores stock necessary parts for all reels, unless they happen to specialize in reel repair. Even then, it's doubtful they'll have a part that would be needed for an old favorite.

Ordering reel parts can take time and if the angler waits until the last minute he may have to buy a new reel in order to salvage a fishing trip.

Also, failing to check rods for cracks or worn guides before the season gets under way can be disastrous. Worn or broken fishing guides can result in frayed lines and lost fish.

Replacing rod guides is a fairly simple job, but it takes time and should not be left as a last minute project.

If nothing else, tackle boxes should be pulled out once in awhile, just to make sure no moisture has gathered to rust hooks and lures. And line should be checked for wear and rot.

Lures also should be checked for broken hooks and plastic plugs should be inspected for cracks or broken lips. A crack can cause plastic lures to fill with water and not run properly.

The angler willing to take the time can also salvage lures that appear ready for the junk pile. Some may be amazed at what fine steel wool can do to restore the finish to tarnished spoons and spinners.

Lures with chipped off paint can be touched up or repainted and some experimentation with colors might lead to a hot new weapon for the coming season.

The angler who likes to make his own fishing lures, flies, poppers and plastic worms has extra work ahead of him restocking the supply of favorite baits.

The fisherman who prefers store bought lures still must inventory his collection just to make sure none of his favorites are missing.

A pen and paper should be handy at all times to jot down needed supplies, even if the holiday season has left the angler too broke to purchase replacements. At least when the money is available, he'll have a sheet telling him what's needed.

For the serious angler with tackle in constant readiness, there are other projects, such as ordering and studying maps of new lakes he plans to fish. Such preseason planning often leads to honey holes.

And don't forget to check the sinkers, swivels, leaders, bobbers, landing nets, waders, hip boots, outboard motor, boats, life jackets and other accessories.

The way we see it

Don't sacrifice program quality

While recognizing the desirability of maintaining good neighborhood schools, we feel the Mount Prospect Dist. 57 Board of Education made a mistake in voting not to close Sunset Park School in Mount Prospect next year.

The board decided Monday to go against a special committee's recommendation that the school be closed to offset an expected $75,000 deficit next year.

As a result, the quality of education in the whole district is likely to suffer, because board members are now looking into other ways to reduce expenditures: increasing class sizes, cutting programs, reducing administrative and clerical staffs and increasing fees.

Closing the school would have been a better option for several reasons.

The district faces a continuing budget deficit during the next five years. Administration projections put the district $2 million in debt by 1981 if drastic steps are not taken to reduce expenditures.

Closing Sunset Park, the smallest of the district's six schools, would save an estimated $95,000 next year, thereby wiping out the $75,000 deficit, and up to $122,000 by the 1979-80 school year.

Busing Sunset students to other schools would cost only $9,400, according to administration figures, and even this amount could be offset by money the district could receive by renting the facility.

Keeping Sunset open means there will be 11 empty classrooms in the district — almost the number of classrooms now being occupied by students at the school. It seems a waste to maintain so many empty rooms when they can be eliminated.

The other alternatives which will be studied by the board will no doubt save money, but they appear to be nickel-and-dime savings rather than anything substantial.

We strongly oppose Dist. 57 sacrificing any part of the fine educational program it now offers.

Sunset Park parents brought tremendous pressure on the board to keep the school open. We can understand the feelings of these parents and the board's sensitivity to their pressure. But at the same time, we expect the board of education to make a decision that's best for the entire district.

If the decision is irrevocable, we hope that parents throughout the district — including those from Sunset Park — will now bring pressure on the board to find a better solution to the fiscal problem than reducing the quality of education.

A welcome bus line

A gaping hole in Northwest suburban mass transportation may be about to be closed, thanks to Buffalo Grove and the Regional Transportation Authority.

Last week Buffalo Grove's village board directed the RTA to prepare an agreement to provide six-month trial service on two new routes, one which will extend to the Arlington Heights train station and the other to Harper College in Palatine and Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg.

To attend Harper, it's now necessary to travel by car, for there's no bus service to the campus. The new plan, although it provides the buses only when they aren't needed for the Arlington Heights commuter service, provide an alternative.

It'll take time and money, of course, to change the habits of Harper's students, but in the interest of gasoline economy, it deserves a full and well-publicized trial. We hope the RTA gets the service rolling as soon as possible, both to Arlington Heights and to the Woodfield-Harper area.

At what point does carrying those become a luxury?

'Ford's speech missed target'

President Ford's address on the State of the Union to the public on Jan. 19 was a real Bicentennial "Rally 'Round the Flag Boys" speech. He made us feel good, saying that the economy of the nation was better. Yes, it has been for the merchandising, most stores and especially large business organizations. They had a great Christmas season. But how does that match up with the high percentage of the unemployed of the nation? President Ford did not mention that which is of grave concern to all of us.

He said there would be a tax deduction of $200 a year for a family of four making $15,000 a year. Big deal. That's about per person what a senator or congressman spends in one day on drinks in a posh club. Why not instead an increase of taxes for individuals earning $50,000 or more? This would be a necessary government increase.

PRESIDENT FORD said he would cut down on federal spending but did not say how or in what specific areas. Not in the pay of government officials who are paid too much in consideration of their duties!

In the President's address he said we must maintain an adequate strong defense against other world powers. This must be done. But he neglected to inform us, we the people, just what his policies would be.

He advised us to supplement big businesses and monopolies. I believe President Ford leans too far to big business interests and keeps their maintenance.

Big business and industry are bound to have effect on government and all areas of our life. In 1865 during President William McKinley's administration, the contributions that were made by Standard Oil and other large companies were permitted and thought could serve the best interests of the government. But in 1901 Theodore Roosevelt made known that while industrial concentration was difficult to maintain it must submit to regulation.

President Ford is overlooking this in his administration and did so on his address to the union. He talked down to the people with his red, white and blue star-studded speech.

IF WE ARE TO LIVE as a liberal nation we must maintain fair policies and that means that the Supreme Court must regulate, investigate and even curtail corporations to serve in the best interests of the American people.

President Ford mentioned nothing in his address to really alter or help the political distrust that we have in government policies, he does not want any ways to be altered or changed. He made no format or policy or proposal in his address to aid the unemployed.

Former President Franklin D. Roosevelt at least inaugurated a WPA program to put the unemployed to work. It helped the morale of the unemployed to work for substance. There's work to be done for the ones who are able, cleaning out polluted rivers and creeks, repairing roads, work in many fields, that government officials are paying people to do who are oddly absent.

Evidently the President is underestimating the thinking of the people. He appears to be of the opinion that we are taking it for granted that our government will deal rightly under our various departments. But we are not sure. We are disbelieving, and why?

A FEW MONTHS ago the people were warned that there was a shortage of natural gas. Not the gasoline for autos. Regular gas that many people use for home heating. This turned out to be completely untrue. In this way big businesses foster people to overspend, anything to keep the ball rolling. In areas like this we depend on our government to curtail such practices.

Remember that our President must protect our Constitutional form of government — a democratic republic — against attack from within or from without. He must make sure that individual citizens' rights are guaranteed by the Constitution.

In his address he appeared to want us to think "it's swell" as the gangsters used to say to their friends in the 1930s (knowing this friend might be bumped off any time), "Well, if I don't see you again it's been swell."

'Harms cared about us'

Reading this morning's headlines was a very sad day indeed.

Alice Harms, in our estimation, has been one of the most dedicated village servants Arlington Heights has had for many years.

Over the past few years, watching her at her job has been a source of reassurance; that someone down there at the village hall really cares about us.

Through many hours of research, she always seemed to be an authority on any subject. This also gave us the confidence someone sitting at that table of trustees knew what they were doing.

Reading articles in the paper these past eight months, we have wondered how much she could take. But what is even sadder is that we, as a community, could not have given her the added strength and encouragement to keep her in there fighting for us.

I do hope everyone stops to give her resignation some thought, to why something like this had to happen. Unfortunately, you are getting what you voted for. We personally feel Arlington Heights can do much better. There has to be some more Alice Harms in Arlington Heights someplace, maybe it is time to start looking!

United Fund lauds response

The Elk Grove United Fund Board would like to take this opportunity to express its appreciation to both the residential and business community for its generous support of our 1975 Crusade of Mercy campaign. We would also like to thank all of our campaign workers who unselfishly gave of their time to help make this our most successful fund-raising year.

It is especially gratifying to have received such a tremendous response during what has been termed a recession period. We are proud to serve the people who live and work in this outstanding community.

Thank you very much.

'Why-is-its' perplex columnist

by DOROTHY MEYER

I know that everyone is subject to the "why-is-its." Like why is it that the kids come down with chicken pox the day before the family vacation, or why is it that one hour before you're expecting 12 guests for dinner, the oven acts funny, the refrigerator defrosts off schedule and the toilet plugs up?

But most of all, why is it that the week before the annual company dinner dance my fingernails always break?

It happened again this year.

My nails were coming along nicely, I was keeping the ragged edges trimmed and refraining from eating my cuticle — and suddenly they started to disintegrate. But sneaky-like and I wasn't fully aware of their awful condition until about three hours before the big event.

So I dashed downtown and bought some false fingernails.

I have used false parts of all kinds, including eyelashes which I gave up when I realized that nearsighted people can't apply them accurately, but fingernails are something else.

So take heed.

First of all, be sure that there are really ten nails in the package. It is very frustrating, especially when down to two hours before party time, to discover that you are short one thumbnail and never mind the smart mouth in the family who suggests that you can suck your thumb all night and maybe no one will notice.

Secondly, disregard the warning: BEFORE YOU START, READ INSTRUCTIONS CAREFULLY. This only has to do with the fact that you may be fatally allergic to the glue and should test it on a teeny portion of your pinky nail. What you must do, even before you read the instructions, is PUT ON YOUR GIRDLE.

There is no way that even the stoutest of glue is going to keep those fingernails on if you have to pull on a girdle AFTER application.

And on the subject of the "stoutest of glue" — all glue only sticks when you don't want it to and don't you ever forget it. Besides the girdle casualties, you can lose one false fingernail flipping a light switch, two more pointing at your husband and a couple more will drop off just for the helluvit — but there will always be the two that are there forever or until your arm falls off, whichever comes first.

Therefore, be prepared to attend the company bash with two Fu Manchu nails, seven stubs —and one sharpie stuck in your girdle which you will not discover until halfway to the party.

But be happy — the old fingernail-in-the-girdle trick never fails to keep you looking wide-eyed and alert throughout the after-dinner speeches. And that's good.

Political briefs

Honesty issue brings divided responses

by STEVE BROWN

A number of political candidates Friday continued to hop around all sides of the proposed political honesty constitutional amendments as they made campaign appearances around the state.

Gov. Daniel Walker, in a radio interview with WGN-AM's Wally Phillips, said he supports the three constitutional amendments being proposed by the Coalition for Political Honesty. The amendments would ban the practice of legislators taking their full year's salary in advance, prevent "double dipping," and enact stricter conflict of interest laws.

Walker said he has tried to get similar legislation enacted in the Illinois General Assembly, but has not been successful. He had not previously backed the coalition publicly.

Michael Bakalis, a Democratic candidate for comptroller, told a Rockford group, he "endorsed the substance, but not the form, of the constitutional amendments being proposed by the coalition."

Bakalis questioned whether the double-dipping provision would block teachers from running for office.

State Comptroller George Lindberg, who is running for reelection, said he supports "most" of the proposed amendments, but not all of them.

Lindberg endorses the "double-dipping" and advance pay ban provisions. He noted that while a member of the Illinois General Assembly he had sponsored similar legislation, which was defeated. However, he voiced concern about the conflict of interest provisions which could "make it impossible for legislators to vote on most bills."

He pointed out as an example that a lawmaker with a car could not vote on license fee increases or no fault insurance.

Young issues Mikva challenge

Congressional candidate Samuel H. Young renewed a 1974 campaign challenge Friday by asking U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, not to accept campaign contributions from organized labor political action groups.

Young had made a similar challenge during his campaign with Mikva two years ago. Mikva declined to accept the proposal. Young did not accept contributions from any organization outside the district in 1974.

During a press conference in Park Ridge, Young said he has not determined whether he will continue to refuse to accept contributions from outside groups. He also noted he did not make a similar challenge to State Sen. John Nimrod-R-Glenview, and Daniel Hales who are also seeking the Republican nomination for the race against Mikva. "I'll wait to see what Mikva will do before I make a decision," Young said.

"I don't intend to contact Nimrod or Hales. I still consider my opponent is Abner Mikva," he said, adding that he did not consider it a "double standard" to issue the challenge to Mikva, but not to his Republican opponents, whom he will confront in the March 16 primary.

Mikva collected about $50,000 during his two campaigns against Young. Young said he received about $25,000 from political action groups during his 1972 campaign. Each man spent more than $400,000 in the two campaigns.

In response to Young's letter, a Mikva aide said, "The Congressman has seen the letter and does not wish to get involved in the primary campaign with Mr. Young, Sen. Nimrod or Mr. Hales."

Howlett, Anderson endorsed

Two statewide candidates picked up new endorsements Friday. Sec. of State Michael Howlett obtained the backing of the Addison Township Democratic Organization, the only Democratic township in DuPage County. Earlier this week, Howlett was endorsed by the Maine Township Democratic organization.

It also was announced that U.S. Rep. Edward Derwinski, R-4th, will endorse Joan Anderson, a Republican candidate for lieutenant governor. She is running against St. Clair County Sheriff Dave O'Neal for the GOP nomination.

O'Neal blasts Hartigan

In his first Chicago press conference of the primary campaign, O'Neal charged Lt. Gov. Neil Hartigan is "partially responsible for the state governmental problems."

O'Neal said Hartigan should have resigned from office three years ago when he determined that he could not work with Gov. Daniel Walker.

In a separate appearance, Hartigan started a flying tour of the state with a Meigs Field Press conference. Hartigan said Walker was responsible for many of the state's financial problems.

New state rule provokes the question:

Is school meditation really prayer?

World of religion
by David E. Anderson

Both sides in the longstanding debate over prayers in the public school are giving close scrutiny to the implementation of a controversial Connecticut measure allowing periods of "silent meditation" in school rooms prior to the beginning of classes.

How the meditation measure is implemented and carried out in practice could, in the eyes of some observers, provide a model for other states and localities wishing to get around or modify the Supreme Court's ban on prayer in the public schools.

The measure reads:

"The board of education of each town and of each regional school district shall provide opportunity at the start of each school day to allow those students and teachers who wish to do so, the opportunity to observe such time in silent meditation."

"THIS IS simply a cosmetic form of school prayer," according to William Olds of the Connecticut Civil Liberties Union.

Olds said he opposes the act because he believes " it represents an effort to subvert the U.S. Supreme Court decision against compulsory prayers."

The Supreme Court, in several decisions now more than a decade old, has struck down laws providing for any reading or reciting of prayers or Bible passages.

In its most famous decision, Engel vs. Vitale, in which the court declared unconstitutional a verbal prayer devised by the New York Board of Regents, the court said:

"NEITHER THE fact that the prayer maybe denominationally neutral nor the fact that it's observance on the part of the students is voluntary can serve to free it from the limitations of the Establishment Clause."

The question becomes whether or not meditation is prayer.

Olds contends that is and the record of the debate on the matter suggests that the state legislators were intending to institute a form of prayer.

Rep. Clyde Sayre of Waterbury, Conn., a member of the joint conference committee that put the measure together told the Connecticut House during debate on the bill that "the intent of the bill is for prayer in the schools."

AN EARLIER version of the measure included the word "prayer" instead of "meditation" but it was apparently felt that the word prayer was vulnerable to a court test.

According to Olds, however, the meditation act "cannot be attacked on its face: meditation per se is not unconstitutional."

Olds notes that implementation — and the CCLU is closely watching that implementation — "will rest in the hands of individual teachers and principals, many of whom have already been conditioned through news coverage and through their own religious training to accept meditation as prayer.

''THROUGH THEM, children throughout the state will be placed in a situation of required prayer, despite their personal feelings, despite their parents' convictions, despite the principle involved," Olds contends.

In Maine there is also a strong drive for restoration of prayers in the public school.

That drive has won the support of the state's governor, James B. Longley, who has said he will support legislation establishing prayer, especially in the form of meditation, in the schools.

"At the very least I think we should strive for the right of any individual to have the opportunity to have a brief period of silent meditation to start or end the school day," Longley told reporters at Christmas.

He said he would support "any legislation or constitutional amendment that will allow prayer to be returned to our schools on a voluntary, interdenominated basis."

Apartment rents to go up in spring

adjustment in the fall if the market stays strong."

Look for an 8 per cent boost in apartment rental cost if a contract comes up for April renewal, said Browning Yelvington, vice president and general manager of American Invs-Co. Management, Inc., Chicago. The firm manages Countryside Apartments in Palatine and other area projects. Yelvington is president of the Apartment Council of Metropolitan Chicago.

YELVINGTON said he doesn't expect further rent hikes for tenants who signed leases in October. Operating costs jumped 10 per cent in 1975 and 12 per cent in 1974, he said. "As the apartment market tightens, all apartment owners will try to get increases in rents to offset operating costs."

Tom Atkinson, coowner of Relocation Consultants, Inc. of Chicago, said apartment dwellers in the Northwest suburbs are receiving rent increases ranging up to 4 per cent. Vacancy rates are higher in the area than other suburbs because owners previously raised rates, he said.

"The economy appears to be picking up a little bit," Atkinson said. He predicts an increasing number of transferees will settle in the Northwest suburbs, easing the problem of vacant units. Atkinson is based in the firm's Mount Prospect office.

Most building owners offer a one-year lease, Sally said of Baird & Warner activity. Owners may give two-year leases that include a minimum 10 per cent rent increase the second year, he said. Sally added that rents will have to increase as much as 40 per cent before developers will decide to put up new apartment buildings. Rent control would only make things worse, he said.

New Secret Service 'man' keeps vigil with cap gun

TIGGER KINDEL

VAIL, Colo. (UPI) — The newest member of the contingent assigned to protect President Ford at his mountain resort home carries a cap pistol during duty hours and a third-grade reader when he's off.

"There wasn't much to do when they (the Fords) came over and I wanted to help so I'd go talk to the guys (Secret Service agents)," said Tigger Kindel, 9, the son of Ford family friends Nancy and Ted Kindel.

Now it's official. He is an Honorary Junior Member of the Secret Service.

TIGGER WAS given the award over the Christmas holidays. The certificate states he will "help the Secret Service by upholding the Constitution and obeying the laws of the United States."

He said the duties involved are simple.

"I just sit and talk and once I waited in a jeep for a while. And I have to clean up my room for the bomb squad for when he (Ford) is coming over," said Tigger. "But when they finish, it's a mess again."

The third-grader's interest began during Ford's vacation while he was vice president. Mrs. Kindel said her son spent hours talking to the Secret Service agents accompanying Ford on social visits to the Kindel home.

DISPLAYING THE proper discretion, he has refused to disclose the nature of the discussions.

After Ford became president, Tigger continued his vigils with the Secret Service and offered to help patrol the village.

According to Mrs. Kindel, Tigger lons a suit coat, cap pistol and pin given him by Ford for the presidential visits. He has also purchased an ear plug for his walkie-talkie to complete his Secret Service uniform.

He said Ford was pleased to hear about the award.

"HE JUST STARTED laughing and said he was glad," said Tigger, whose grandfather was the President's scoutmaster in Grand Rapids, Mich.

However, Mrs. according to Mrs. Kindel, the boy's career has not been without problems. She said Tigger's new walkie-talkie caused confusion for the agents over the holidays.

"The Secret Service asked if any of the children had walkie-talkies, because his was interfering with their messages," she said. "I guess he was on their frequency, but he didn't say if he heard anything."

Ask Andy

Eel immune to power shortage

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the Merit Students Encyclopedia to Brenda Reeves, 10, of Enid, Okla., for her question:

DOES THE ELECTRIC EEL REALLY HAVE ELECTRICITY?

Yes, he does. The electric eel is not worried about the energy shortage at all. This fishy fellow has his own personal, built-in electric batteries. True, he does not use them to switch on his own reading lamp. But he does use them to send electric shocks through the water. And the shocks from a big electric eel are powerful enough to stun a horse.

The electric eel lives a lazy life in certain slow, muddy streams of South America. He has about 50 cousins, large and small, but none of them is related to the genuine slippery-type eel. However, all of them have their own built-in electric batteries. And all of them send weak and strong electric shocks through the water. Other fish are not safe in the water, which explains why electric eels do not have to rush around to escape from enemies.

A large electric eel may be 6 feet long. He has a thick snaky-shape body with two tiny side fins behind his head and a long wavy fin on his underside. His color is murky green to match the murky water. His head and internal organs are crowded into the first nine inches of his total length. The rest of him is a big fat tail. And this is where he keeps his electric batteries.

He has one main battery and two smaller ones. They behave somewhat like a man-made dry-cell battery. However, naturally they build up their electrical charges inside living cells. They work because opposite electric charges build up in different parts of each battery. The negative charge is up front, the positive charge is at the tail end. When the opposites are discharged, the electric ell sends a shock through the water.

One of his small batteries sends out weak shocks all the time, even when he is resting. When he swims along, he sends out shock signals to find his way. He sends about 50 little shocks every second. They bounce off solid objects and echo back to tell him how to avoid them. After all, the water is very cloudy and his tiny eyes are almost blind.

The electric eel uses more powerful shocks to capture his food. When a fish swims by, he gets a series of shocks that are strong enough to stun him and perhaps kill him. Then the electric eel swims up to eat his fallen victim. A powerful shock from his batteries is strong enough to stun a human swimmer — and several of these mighty shocks may kill him. So no sensible person goes swimming in streams that belong to the big electric eels.

Andy sends a seven-volume set of the Chronicles of Narnia to Joel Dietrich, 9, of Surrey, B.C., Canada, for this question:

HOW MANY EGGS DOES A SNAKE LAY?

A big python snake may lay 100 eggs and leave them to hatch in the warm ground. Smaller snakes lay smaller eggs, maybe a dozen or two dozen at a time. There are about 2,400 different snakes in the world and most types lay eggs with soft white shells. Each type lays a certain number to suit herself. Nobody knows for sure how many there will be because next year the same snake may lay a bigger batch of eggs.

Rattlesnakes and a few other snakes give birth to live babies. Actually the little snakes develop inside the mother's body and come forth in shells that look like clear plastic. They soon break free and go off on their own. There is no need for a mother snake to take care of her little ones because they are born knowing how to take care of themselves.

No real 'new' entries as second season starts

by JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI)—The television audience shot down 15 of the 26 new shows the networks produced with great fanfare last September, and now the casualties are being dragged off the screen and replaced with new, or anyway other, entries.

A few of the replacements already are on the air, with others about to bow in.

Of those already on the air, "One Day At A Time," Norman Lear's latest contribution to situation comedy on CBS, has proved a winner so far, even getting up into the top ten of the Neilsen ratings.

"THE BLUE KNIGHT," the new CBS cop show starring George Kennedy is performing adequately in the ratings.

"Popi," new on CBS Tuesday nights at 7:30 p.m., stars Hector Elizondo in a situation comedy about a Puerto Rican father who holds three part-time jobs to support his young sons. It replaces "Joe & Sons," a situation comedy about an Italian-American father struggling to raise two young sons.

NBC, the scene of the September season's Thursday night massacre which saw "The Montefuscos" and "Fay" pulled off the air before the frost was on the pumpkin, has found 7 to 8 p.m. a continuing trouble spot. Its new sitcoms in that slot, "Grady" and "The Cop and the Kid," have been unable so far to establish themselves as shows the audience hates to miss.

ABC, slower than the competition to replace old shows with new, has so far aired only "The Bionic Woman," a spin-off of "The Six Million Dollar Man."

OTHER CBS entries for the new season are "Sara," which will premiere Feb. 13 at 7 p.m. with Brenda Vaccaro as a 19th Century schoolteacher who leaves the cozy East to teach frontier children in Colorado, and "The Sonny & Cher Show" that will replace just plain "Cher."

"The Dumplings" will be the first of two NBC comedies, bowing in Wednesday at 8:30 p.m., starring James Coco and Geraldine Brooks in another Norman Lear situation comedy.

Collectors tuned in to radio memorabilia

Collecting
with Grace Carolyn

Pawing through a stack of old sheet music at a flea market last summer, I came upon a leaflet with holes punched in the side for inserting into a looseleaf folder. On the cover was a picture of "One Man's Family" standing in front of a microphone, autographed (not personally, but printed) by the cast, and at first I thought it was a piece of music such as the other things in the pile. But the dealer explained that it was a radio script of the "One Man's Family" program, and it was dated 1940. Just because I hadn't seen one before, I bought it for $1.

As it so often happens, once you hear or learn about something, it pops up again, and since then I have read about collectors of these old radio scripts, which were sent out to the listener upon request, in the 1930s and early '40s, for 10 cents each. And in the Antique Trade Annual of Articles for 1974 (Dubuque, Iowa) I discovered quite a lot of information on early radio script collections, written by Marge Waterfield.

OUR FIRST RADIO was one of those curved top table models, received by my grandmother as a gift from relatives in the city soon after electricity came to our small town. She placed it proudly in the center of the room, partly because it was such a marvelous thing to own, and partly because the only outlet was in the center light fixture, from which a solitary uncovered light bulb dangled.

Grandma thought electricity was finite and might run out, so we were allowed to listen for only an hour or so each night, and we each had a turn at our favorite program. Mine was "Little Orphan Annie"; she loved "One Man's Family" with characters she came to think of as real people: Father Barbour, Fanny, Teddy, Claudia, Paul and Clifford in their imaginary home in Sea Cliff, Calif. Once in a while during the day she tuned in to "Ma Perkins," "Stella Dallas" or "Mary Noble."

BUT EVERYONE loved "Amos 'n' Andy," and that show was broadcast across the country, so that in the mid-'30s everyone knew exactly what was going on and what latest mess the "Kingfish" had got himself into. Business people turned their radios up loudly so the customers wouldn't miss an episode while shopping. I can remember, when visiting in Chicago in the summertimes, the sound of Joe Louis' fights came from every open window, while the listeners sat outside on the front steps, not missing a word of the excited announcer.

Perhaps, if you are pre-rock station age, you remember some of the others: Lowell Thomas and his "Thrilling Moments in Thrilling Lives," for instance. Marge Waterfield, author of the radio script collecting article in the Antique Trader, says: "When Lowell Thomas told the story of Lawrence of Arabia or the Court Martial of Dan Edwards you were on the edge of your mohair sofa every minute."

SCHOOL CHILDREN and teachers used radio, much as they use television today, by tuning in the "American School of the Air" to hear a variety of programs covering geography, literature, art appreciation and current events. Before "Dear Abby" you would rely on the advice of Lydia Pinkham's "Voice of Experience" program in 1932 (which is a pretty funny title when you think of it) emoting on such subjects as "In-Law Trouble," "Petting" and even "Honeymoon Hazards."

Radio memorabilia includes the scripts mentioned, program listings from newspapers, leaflets from the educational shows and can extend to the premiums offered by the various programs, a related collectible.

Trivia is a favorite party game today. Become a collector of radio oldies and you'll even know the name of Sergeant Preston's (of the Yukon) dog. Or what happened, regularly, on every Fibber McGee and Molly show when he opened the closet door.

Juniors deck mitten tree

A mitten tree is standing in the Raupp Memorial building in Buffalo Grove, just waiting for decorations of hats, mittens and scarves destined for the children of Appalachia.

Each month the Buffalo Grove Junior Woman's Club, which maintains the tree as a continuing project, removes these decorations and ships them off to the needy. Then the tree begins filling up again with further contributions from the Juniors, the local park district and the local Lions club.

Many of the area schools have also offered winter accessories that are in their unclaimed lost and found collection.

All donations from organizations and individuals are welcome, according to president Barbara Sheldon of the Juniors, who may be called at 541-2661 for further details.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Get bulk into diet for spastic colon

Should a person who has had ulcerative colitis and now has a spastic colon problem, go through with a hemorrhoid operation? Or should they try the injection method?

The hemorrhoids aren't so painful, but they bleed a lot and this is very frustrating.

The first point is to clarify your diagnosis. Your letter suggests that you have mild ulcerative colitis if you had it at all. Sometimes a number of diseases of the colon are confused with what is basically a spastic colon.

Spastic colon may contribute to developing hemorrhoids. Before any treatment for hemorrhoids, I would recommend that you solve the spastic colon problem. There are a number of things you can do for this.

High on the list of positive things to do is to increase the bulk in your diet, particularly cereal fiber found in bran, and whole wheat cereals and by using real whole wheat bread (not half white flour and half whole wheat flour or colored imitations often sold to the unwary).

Then you should have a bowel training program so you develop normal function. The procedure isn't difficult but involves your habit pattern and diet. For specific details send 50 cents for The Health Letter number 2-1, Irritable or Spastic Colon. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

THE CHOICE OF technique for treatment of hemorrhoids depends on their extent and location. Some internal hemorrhoids can be treated by injection. It is the internal hemorrhoids that tend to bleed and they may not cause any other symptoms, such as pain or itching. Often a person is first aware of the internal hemorrhoids when they start bleeding.

Continued blood loss from any cause from any location, even in small amounts can lead to a loss of iron, producing an iron deficiency with anemia.

External hemorrhoids cause symptoms. The nerve fibers for pain and itching are under the skin. You do not have these pain fibers inside the sphincter where internal hemorrhoids are located. Thus, when a person complains of pain and itching from hemorrhoids it usually involves external hemorrhoids at least as part of the picture.

Incidentally since the painful itching area is outside the sphincter, those suppositories inserted into the rectum above the hemorrhoids sold to the unsuspecting public are totally worthless. External application, not internal, is needed to relieve any symptoms a person has from external hemorrhoids.

THE EXTERNAL hemorrhoids that cause symptoms can be removed. They cannot be treated by injection. A decision as to the advisability to treat or not depends on their extent and the amount of symptoms they cause.

Sometimes both internal and external hemorrhoids are present. Elimination of hemorrhoids then requires surgery.

Small external tags can even be removed by tying a rubber band around them but obviously this procedure will not be satisfactory for larger hemorrhoids or those involving internal and external veins.

Hemorrhoids are nothing more than varicose veins around the rectum. Good bowel habits help prevent pressure on the veins in this area and reduces the likelihood of hemorrhoids or their complications.

Social Security penalizes average citizen

Dear Dorothy: How can anyone live on $2,500 a year these days? That's all Social Security pays and why, at 67, I have to keep working. Someone told me there is a trick to this and that I can still work and draw Social Security. I telephoned about this and was told no. Maybe you know about the trick involved. — Mrs. R.G.T.

The person at the Social Security office must have misunderstood you. There is a way. Beginning with the turn of the year, the top payment is now $2,760 a year. The so-called triik is that if you can properly and legally arrange earnings, you can draw Social Security for most months — going off it those months when earnings go beyond $230 for the month.

The law as it stands penalizes the average citizen. I've been conducting a minicrusade against it for years. Those with big investment capital can draw dividends without limit and still get Social Security, while wage earners are denied benefits. Write your senators and representatives. Meanwhile, go to the Social Security office and find out just how you can arrange to spread your wage income legally and still qualify for federal payments.

As a matter of fact, I've seen belts with it. It's really an astonishing invention. The two pieces (Velcro) hold with an iron grip, yet are easily separated by merely pulling apart.

OJO DE DIOS

A four-leaf clover or rabbit's foot means good luck to many people. Hundreds of years ago Indians in North and South America had good luck symbols, too. They made colorful "Ojo de Dios" (God's eyes) to bring them good luck and blessings. At first they wound yucca leaves around sticks to make them. Later they started using bright wool yarn.

To make a God's eye for your home, glue two popsicle sticks together to form a cross. Hold until the glue sets. Cut lengths of different colored yarn in 2-foot, 3-foot, and 4-foot lengths.

Glue the end of the 2-foot piece to the center of the crossed sticks. Wind counterclockwise as shown below until the yarn is used up. Glue the end to a stick. Turn the sticks over. Glue the end of the 3-foot piece to a stick and begin wrapping as before, but winding twice around each stick. Turn the sticks over and add the 4-foot piece in the same way, winding twice around each stick. Glue down the end. Add a small loop of yarn to hang your Ojo de Dios. Good luck!

Your recipe to great meals.

Stocks wrap up busiest week in market's history

NEW YORK (UPI) — Wall Street, bolstered by investors eager to get on the new year rally bandwagon, finished its busiest week ever Friday with prices rising to 26-month high levels in heavy trading on the New York Sock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average gained 10.47 points to 953.95, giving it a 24.32-point gain for the week and bringing its advance for the year to 101.54 points. The average, which lost 6.38 points the previous two sessions, finished at the best level since it closed at 956.58 on Oct. 31, 1973.

The turnover of 33,640,000 shares brought the week's total at 161,668,570 shares, eclipsing last week's 159,706,510 as the largest number traded in a week in the 184-year history of the NYSE.

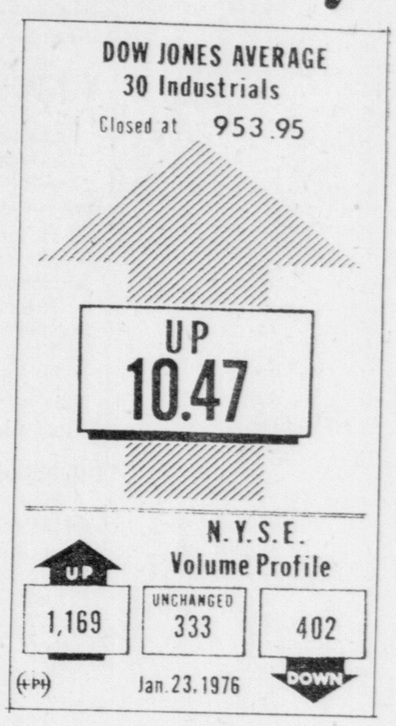
THE WIDESPREAD rally took the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index 1.17 points higher to 99.21 and increased the average price of an NYSE share by 39 cents.

Advances routed declines, 1,169 to 402, among the 1,904 issues crossing the tape.

Blue chips and glamors led the latest surge as many investors, entering the rally late, took advantage of price weaknesses of the past two days. Analysts said the action showed there was considerable money yet on the sidelines.

There was little fresh background news to influence the market.

The Commerce Department Thursday reported retail sales fell 1.8 per cent last week while running 13 per cent ahead of the year-ago period.



Commerce also announced a slight dip of 0.5 per cent in December durable goods orders.

Chemicals and drugs, among the hardest hit by recent profit taking, moved sharply higher. Improved earnings and a brighter outlook also helped.

Prices closed higher in active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share increased 14 cents. Volume totaled 4,380,000, up sharply from the 3,030,000 traded Thursday.

As the play progresses and various obstacles arise, Fred and Lilli find they still have a deep affection for each other, only to have a mishap of the wrong flowers delivered to her from Fred. She then announces she is marrying Harrison Howll, a Texas millionaire, and will be leaving the show and Fred Graham.

But after some pressure from the two gangsters who arrive to collect a debt from Fred, Lilli decides to return, proving that Petruchio, Fred Graham, does tame the shrew, Katharine, Lilli Vanessi.

'Break one-oh for a bear report... Smokey with ears sweeping leaves; pull the hammer up'

by Mike Klein

Naughty boy, C. W. McCall!

You old son-of-a-duck, letting pig-pen run wild like that 'bout a mile outa shaky town, hauling logs 'n hogs and takin' up with those weirdo long-haired friends of Jesus in a chartreuse micro-bus.

Why, you oughta be ashamed of yourself, C. W., allowing those trucker people to speed across our red, white and blue highways, evading the Interstate constables by communicating with their citizen's band radios.

Well, mercy sakes, good buddy, you realize what you've done?

Since mid-November, when C. W. McCall's song "Convoy" first assaulted the country and western music charts, there's been a glorified interest in citizen band radio, the airwave medium for anyone with $100 and a mouth.

Seldom have so many Americans sounded as if all of them were born in Kentucky, Tennessee or West Virginia. Seldom have so many television sets had crazy lines. And we're thankful today for a new brand of widow . . . the citizen band radio widow.

Citizen band radio is the "hula hoop" of electronics. Very few products capture the country's imagination to such a fantastic degree. It's a multi-million dollar business.

Thirty years ago, the infant electronics field tickled our fantasy with television. Transistor radios and stereo later drew "Oohs" and "Aahs" from a buying public which could not stop buying.

Nationwide affluence was measured by the number of automobiles and televisions per household.

Now, it's the citizen band radio with a normal broadcasting range of six-to-eight miles which has found a place in the hearts and automobiles of millions.

"I wouldn't be without it, don't even listen to my AM radio anymore," said Ralph Jensen of Rolling Meadows. His handle, a CBer's slang name, is "Dry Martini."

"It saves me money. It saves me time," said Larry Lewis of Des Plaines who uses six CB units in his business.

"I have some very good friends in citizen's band," said Stu Collins, afternoon program host on WIND radio. "They seem to enjoy it."

His "Stu Collins Secret CBer Contest" gave away six citizen band radios between Jan. 11-16 in cooperation with the Schaumburg based Northwest CB, which sells the radios.

The concept for low frequency citizen band radio was developed about 15 years ago. It was designed primarily for rural areas and persons operating small businesses, such as the service station owner who offered snow plowing.

Citizen band radio didn't become an approved middle-class toy until after the nationwide trucker's strike which plowed the U.S.A. under mothballs two years ago.

Many articles then depicted how Interstate truckers communicated on their CB units, and how they avoided speed traps set by "Smokey the Bear," as McCall described in "Convoy."

There are millions of CBers nationwide today. Send $4 to the Federal Communications Commission (FCC), buy a radio and begin broadcasting. It's that easy.

The U.S. government agency issued 126,718 Class D citizen band radio licenses to Illinois residents last year. A whopping 16,713 Illinois persons applied during November.

Citizen band radio has become the largest medium under FCC jurisdiction. Projected growth indicates the trend will skyrocket another two or three years before slowing down.

Jensen bought his CB radio nine months ago for, "just gabbing on the way to work. You talk with the same guys every morning, every night, not really saying much, just passing the time."

Jensen drives into Chicago each workday morning with Larry Barrett, the "Irish Bulldog" from Rolling Meadows. Some with whom they speak are The Pole Setter ("because he sets poles," said Jensen), Bucky Beaver, Green Box, Static in the Attic and Yeller in the Cellar.

"Dry Martini" stays tuned to channel 10 (there are 23 channels) while driving I-90. He uses channel 8 near Rolling Meadows and 19 on the highway. That's the trucker's frequency.

"Ten is crowded," said Jensen. "All we're trying to do is get road information, how the old Eisenhower is running."

Citizen band radios are reaching into every possible consumer level, from high school enthusiasts to farmers, bankers to bookkeepers and emergency assist teams to police departments.

Its potential is vastly untapped and some estimates are that CB sales this year will surpass $2 billion.

There seems to be no stopping the citizen band industry. That has created some problems, too.

It's perhaps too easy to become a CBer. Cost is minimal, down to around $125 for an automobile unit plus antenna. Of course, the CBer can spend far greater amounts by choosing more lavish equipment.

There's no problem in licensing. You pay your money to the FCC, fill out their short application and then wait three or four months. That's how far they're backlogged.

Just like that, you're a radio operator. There's no examination required, not even a test of the "10 Code" which governs radio conversation.

Technical knowledge amounts to deciding which hand will hold the microphone so the other can switch channels.

Consequently, the airwaves are packed with people who A) Think it's funny to be obscene, B) Don't know the "10 Code" from cough syrup, C) Shout others off the airwaves, D) Will not yield the airwaves in emergency situations and E) Aren't licensed.

The final group is perhaps the largest. For every CBer who obtains a license, there might be one who never bothers, some sources said.

"I couldn't tell you how many aren't licensed," said Bill Meintell, an FCC engineer in Chicago. "It does seem to have improved in the past year."

An FCC Class D license cost $20 until last March when it was lowered to $4.

Meintell admitted that citizen band radios have been, "a pain. It's our major problem. We spend the majority of our time on this. We're swamped with interference complaints."

The six Chicago based FCC engineers must oversee all radio communications for Illinois and Indiana plus portions of Wisconsin, Iowa and Kentucky. They're also responsible for television problems plus inspecting radio systems for the larger Lake Michigan cruisers.

It's not a job that affords much free

Thieves are after your CB

Police are discovering citizen band radios are fast replacing eight-track tape players in popularity with thieves.

Reasons for the increasing number of CB thefts from vehicles include popularity of the item, easy detection of vehicles with CB's and ease in unscrewing the radio from the dashboard, authorities said.

CB popularity not only means there are more of them around but that they are easily fencable items - one of the easiest stolen items to sell.

Thefts have taken a toll locally. In Schaumburg from June, 1974 through November 1974 only 7 CB units were reported stolen as compared to 70 during the same period last. year.

Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy explained that CB antennas pinpoint targets for thieves. Stealing CB's is easier than stealing tape players because with tape players, thieves must go car to car, risking suspicion by passersby.

In Arlington Heights about 75 CB units were reported stolen from August through the end of last year. "CB radios were a problem before C. W. McCall made them popular," said Capt. Maurice English of the Arlington Heights Police Dept. "We first began to notice it about three years ago when truckers started to use them for dispatching. With the gas shortage and the coming of the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit, CB's became quite popular."

Twenty CB's were stolen in Mount Prospect last month. And 101 of the radios were stolen in Des Plaines last year.

But although police call them the "hottest items" among thieves today, there are some precautions that can deter theft:

— Always lock your car;

— Purchase anti-theft locking devices for your vehicle;

— Park the vehicle under a light at night;

— Record the serial number and model of the unit;

— Etch the driver's license number somewhere on the radio with an engraver;

— Buy a secure mount for the radio that will allow it to be slipped in and out when leaving the car but will "double lock" it when left in. Such mounts are inexpensive and available in most stores where the radios are sold;

— Mount the radio in the glove compartment to hide it from view;

— Buy a detachable antenna and take it with you when you leave the vehicle.

time. "We don't have anywhere near enough personnel to enforce the rules," said Meintell. "It's just that simple."

Bob Kelly works for ALERT, the Affiliated League of Emergency Radio Teams, which assists local police during weather alerts, phone outages, missing child searches, rescue operations and other services.

ALERT relies upon CB radios. Kelly said that many CB users "just come right on top (of their signal) and jabber like there's no tomorrow. If we're conducting legal business, they ought to have more respect.

"It's a big trend now," said Kelly. "Buy a CB. It'll eventually die out, but how soon?"

Lewis of Des Plaines, who utilizes CB radios in his business, complained that many users "show no courtesy whatsoever."

Even Jensen, an avid enthusiast, had to agree, "Nobody uses any real courtesy. You get stepped on, but it doesn't bother me too much."

The FCC's Meintell has heard every complaint. "I've been with the Commission for seven years," he said. "It was bad when I came."

It would seem that a strict FCC penalty schedule might deter misuse. First offenders, whether they are persons using foul language or employing illegal power boosters, receive a "Notice of Apparent Liability." It usually costs them $50.

Second offenders might need to find $100. On a third offense, your license can be revoked. Continued offenses can bring a $10,000 fine and one year in jail.

"Usually by the second time they've got the message," said Meintell. A California man was recently imprisoned.

Citizen band radio became so misused in the Netherlands that national government there outlawed use of the frequency. "They had the same problems we do so they just up and abolished it," Meintell said.

Informal clubs have long existed among CBers, but some users are now pursuing more serious organization.

Jensen belongs to "The Coffee Breakers," a social group. He's also helped found "The Communicators" which held its first meeting last week.

The group will seek correct radio use according to FCC regulations, courtesy at all times and knowledge of emergency procedures. "The Communicators" will use channel eight.

"Anyone who's in trouble can break on eight for a Communicator or a Coffee Breaker and pretty well know you'll get some help," said Jensen.

Similar groups exist elsewhere, but there is no organization like the American Radio Relay League which represents many of the 300,000 licensed ham radio operators.

Their strength may be tested soon. About three years ago, the FCC began discussing a new license for CBers. It would allocate to them a portion of the amateur radio spectrum long reserved for ham operators.

That's a blow to their pride, because ham radio operators believe their rights are earned and not given. Every ham operator must be proficient in Morse Code and pass FCC written examinations.

"You have to work for it," said Collins of WIND, a licensed ham operator for 15 years. "You're not getting something for nothing, or for $4."

Collins said many ham operators are concerned that commercial interests (i.e., CB manufacturers) will one day secure an FCC frequency change which favors CBers.

"Therein lies the great debate," said Collins. "I can't speak for all hams, but we are being threatened that something might be taken away which we've had all along.

"Besides, many of us who've heard CBers don't think they deserve any special privileges," said Collins. "They're not a self-policing group. All kinds of language goes out over the airwaves.

"If they're not handling it properly, why should they get additional frequencies?" he asked. "Unless they clean their act up, then it's a wasted service. When the bands

Dog, sled and "musher" race against time along a windy, isolated farmland trail.

The command is 'HIKE'

by Al Messerschmidt

The cold wind cuts across the snow-covered Illinois-Wisconsin borderland. The bark of one dog, then another mix with the wind above the frozen farmland as a voice commands, "hike . . . hike."

In a winter land now dominated by snowmobiles, a team of dogs, pulling a sled and rider, crash through the distant snow.

The dog team approaches a rutted, uphill path. The dogs, called huskies, powerfully pull forward with hanging tongues. The sled runners squeal across the frozen snow. The driver pants, but pushes the sled forward over rugged terrain and encourages, always encourages, the dogs forward.

The sled driver and dogs race against time over a rough 3.5-mile course in a Lake County forest preserve. The run is a trial for a dozen members of the Midwest Sled Dog Club, Inc. who are preparing for bigger, more important races in distant winter lands.

Dog sledding, the sport is called.

Dog and sled were basic transportation in Canada and Alaska more than 100 years ago. Records of dog sledding as a sport date to 1908 when a team driven by John Hegness raced for 119 hours over 408 miles in the "All Alaskan Sweepstakes" between Nome and Candle.

The airplane and the snowmobile have replaced the dog sled as basic, snow transportation, but the sport has boomed with competition in "hot" weather states like California, throughout the Midwest, in Canada, Norway, Sweden, Germany, Finland and Switzerland.

"Hike is the command that picks up the racing dog's ears. Gone is the once-famous command of that Canadian Mountie, Sgt. Preston, who prompted his lead dog, Yukon King, with cries of "mush . . . mush."

These modern-day dogsledders speak a strange language. They call themselves "mushers." They talk of "rigs" and "gigs," not sleds. They talk to their dogs with only three words — "hike;" "gee" for a right turn; and "haw" for a left turn. "Peddling" is sled pushing by the driver. A "gang line" is an Alaskan racing hitch, made of plastic rope and custom fitted for each dog, that attaches dog to sled.

The words are not important. Time and teamwork are the goals as man and dogs glide over a snow-covered course. A winning 10-dog team averages 17 m.p.h. for 20 mi. as the driver yells encouragement, steers slightly by shifting weight at the sled rear and pushes along uphill slopes.

In a fur-lined parka with boots, gloves, goggles and insulated clothing, the "musher" is protected against the 43 degree below zero wind chill index on this race day. The temperature causes the breath of man and dog to form white clouds as team after team leave the starting chute after two-minute intervals.

The start is the release of pent-up energy for the dogs. The "mushers" arrive at the starting area in vans and pick-ups that pull custom-made dog trailors. As many as a dozen dogs lie in personal cubicles in each trailor and wait for pre-race preparation.

When the trailor doors open, the dogs eagerly jump to the ground, frolic in the snow and wait for the long harness that will turn individual dogs into a team.

Once the race begins, little stops the dogs. The sleds, which weigh less than 40 lbs., cost as much as $200, are 8 feet long and built of white ash wood, contain a simple, foot brake which can drag into the snow. Some drivers also carry grappling hooks for emergency stops.

The "mushers" talk of unexpected race delays when two teams meet along a trail and a dog fight begins or when the dogs spot a rabbit, squirrel or chipmunk and give chase. The drivers also talk of the "bond" which forms between dogs and driver as fall training and conditioning lead into the winter race season.

"It may sound corny, but dog sledding builds a personal relationship. The dogs enjoy the race. When it's over, they know they've done a job," says Jerry Winder of Durand, Ill.

Winder, owner of the Sugar River Kennels, turned from a dog-breeder to a dog sledder more than 8 years ago. He gradually built a team that has raced in Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Sled racing begins with dog training. "First, the dogs must get used to the harness," Winder says. "Then, you teach them to go ahead of you, to run in front on their own."

A dog team in "open" class competition (more than 10 dogs) stretches for more than 15 yards in front of the single-man sled. The driver faces a race with little control, other than frantic voice commands, over the dogs.

Conditioning is the second phase of pre-competition. "A dog needs to build up its wind and muscles like a runner," Winder says.

The fall training includes pulling of a 200-pound "gig" or sled or wheeled carts or car chassis that can weigh more than 600 pounds. When race-time comes, the race sled and its human load weigh less than the training sleds. The ability to pull weight offers non-race awards for dog sledders.

Winder's prize is a seven-year-old dog named "Tundra."

In weight-pulling competition, a dog's ability is measured by the weight it can pull 20 ft. in 90 sec. The dog owner is barred from touching the dog during the pull.

"Tundra," undefeated in six years of pulling against dogs from throughout the nation, set an indoor pulling record in Milwaukee last year. The 135-pound dog pulled 1,750 pounds.

"Tundra's personal record for pulling a wheeled vehicle is a 1963 Chevy pick-up truck," Winder says.

"Tundra" has a "will to win," Winder says. "He's a competitor." "Tundra" does not race with other members of Winder's 12-dog kennel.

The Winder team is a mixture of dog breeds. Siberia Huskies, a pure, registered breed, and Alaskan malamutes, a cross breed, are normal sled pullers. Winder's team includes three Fox Hounds which add speed to the pack.

The Alaskan malamute is the Ferrari of dog racing. The dogs, which weigh between 50 and 60 lbs. are judged as racers by lung capacity, heart and stamina. The husky is straight shouldered, compact with tough, large feet.

The key to the racing team is the lead dog which can cost, if trained to "gee" and "haw" up to $1,500. Non-leaders can cost $500 each.

Mush is no longer the magic word

The other cost of the sport include transportation to races, food, lodging and kennel expenses.

Larry Masek, machinist at the Honeywell Inc. plant in Arlington Heights, houses 34 dogs in a kennel behind his Lake Village, Ill. home. "They're relatively quiet," he says. "If one-quarter or your dogs are in top racing condition you're doing good."

A driver peddles.

Masek races three teams throughout the winter. He runs an open-class, 10-dog team. His 16-year-old son drives a five-dog team and his 14-year-old daughter commands a three-dog team.

"The biggest thrill is winning," says Masek, who is president of the Midwest Sled Dog Club. But, there's also the recreation which comes weekly during four or five training session.

Dog sledding is "the solitude of you and your dogs doing what you want to," Masek says. "It's like soaring in a glider or paddling down a country stream. When you're out late at night, running under a full moon, with only the sound of the runners squeeking on the snow, there's nothing else like it."

Masek says his kennel is the largest in the Chicago area. But, he also talks of "professional" sledders who own more than 50 dogs and compete in "money" races. Current dog sled purses reach $50,000 and the Indianapolis of racing is a 1,049-mile "Iditarod Trail" competition between Nome and Anchorage, Alaska.

Like other sports, dog sledding has created its ruling hiearchy. The International Sled Dog Racing Association was formed in 1966 to promote and govern the sport. Whips are banned, drivers pack sled bags to carry dogs injured during the race and officials require urine samples to check dogs for disease or drugs.

Another rule — a Palatine village ordinance — recently forced Robert Thieme, of 165 S. Greeley St., Palatine, from dog sledding. Thieme, who raced sled dogs for 10 years, was forced to reduce his 7 to 10 dog "family" because local ordinance bars keeping of more than three dogs at a residence.

"You can't race with three dogs," Thieme says. "There's nothing I'd like better than to get on the back of a sled and go."

Urbanization has created problems for the dog sledder. "The biggest problem is to find a place to train the dogs," Masek says. "The larger the team, the more distance you need to run."

Dog sledders look for forest preserve trails, minus horses if possible, farm fields and other workout areas. The dog sled club once raced at Arlington Park Golf Course, Thieme says.

The first snow signals the beginning of the race season for dogs and "musher." This year, trial runs scheduled in December were delayed for January's snow. Now, the season is here. The racing has started in Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin. The command is "hike."

You can see the races

Dog sled competition is scheduled in Illinois during two weeks in February.

Races are scheduled at 11 a.m, Feb. 7 and Feb. 8 at Rock Cut State Park near Rockford.

Competition at 11 a.m. Feb. 14 and Feb. 15 will be at Channel Lake near Antioch.

The four racing dates are scheduled as part of winter carnivals that also include competition in snowmobiling, ice carving and ice fishing.

Citizen band helps police

Citizen band radio operators may warn of speed traps and "Smokey the Bears" and criminals may use the popular items to monitor police activity. Nevertheless, authorities agree the radios are finding a place in law enforcement.

State police, sheriff's police and local police departments have turned to using the radios to get emergency help to disabled cars, accidents or car fires on expressways or isolated stretches of roads. Broadcasts may assist police in locating reckless or drunken drivers and get them off the road. Squad cars, ambulances or fire trucks can be dispatched sooner to cover emergencies or hazardous situations by using CB radios instead of regular police frequencies.

Instead of passersby having to find a highway exit, drive to the nearest telephone and call police to dispatch squad cars, CBers can broadcast the incidents and police who monitor the broadcast can respond immediately.

Sheriff's police are making increased use of CB units, said Fred Braun, community relations officer. Some policemen are using the units in their squad cars, mainly to listen for distress signals "but they also listen to see what the truckers have to say," Braun said.

State Trooper James Shew said some troopers in Dist. 17, what includes the Northwest suburbs, also have CB units in their squad cars.

Authorities complain some operators use the radios improperly and engage in idle conversation over emergency frequencies. But Shew says there are advantages to the units. "They get us to the scene faster," he said.

Rolling Meadows police monitor CB traffic from a receiver in their radio room. Police Chief Lewis Case has pointed out the radio dispatches have aided police in referring calls to the proper jurisdiction or in getting emergency services quickly to the scene.

"They're fantastic," he said. "They're tremendous things."

are cluttered, nobody's going to hear anything."

"The FCC created a monster," Collins said, "and now it's getting out of control."

Ham radio is more than a hobby for Collins. His unit is used to receive traffic reports during Collins' 2 to 6 p.m. WIND program.

There's no denying the popularity of citizen band radio. It holds tremendous, yet unharnessed potential for the commercial and private licensee. But it's unmistakably too big, too uncontrolled.

The FCC's Meintell said citizen band could be closely monitored if there weren't more pressmg needs, such as the Marine Band. "People's lives may depend upon that Marine Band," Meintell said.

"If you've got an ore carrier breaking up out in the middle of the Lake, that's more important than anything going over the citizen band."

There will be a day of reckoning for citizen banders unless someone assumes productive control. But who might that be? CBers themselves who are organized only in small groups? The already overburdened FCC? An entirely new agency?

Citizen band has been a commercial success, a new playtoy for which demand still exceeds production, a logical and sensible means of communication.

Why, it's even been a good music gimmick. Just ask C. W. McCall. You see, for the longest time, he was Bill Fries, an advertising executive from Omaha, Neb.

Now, he's C. W. McCall, making a killing with something that starts out, "Uh, breaker, one nine, This here's the rubber duck, you got a copy on me, pig-pen, c'mon?

"Uh, yeah, ten-four, pig-pen, fer sure, fer sure, by golly, . . ."

C. W., you old fox, you, getting rich like that!

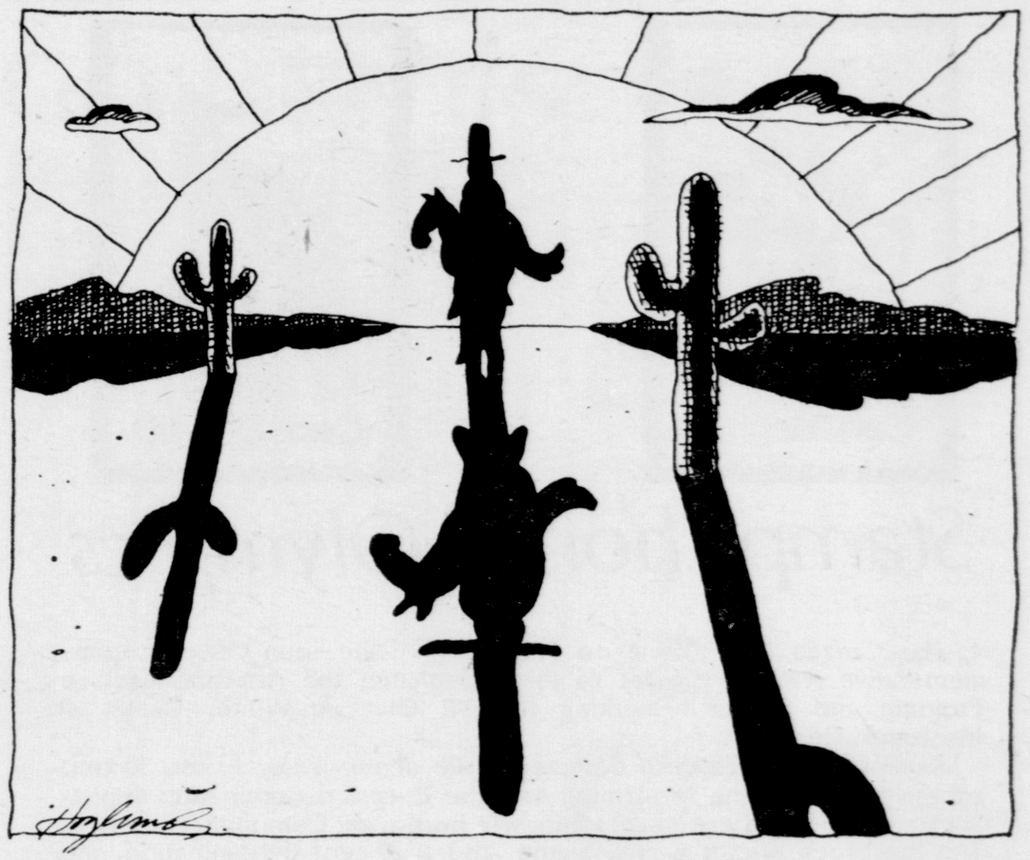
They went thataway!

The western rides into the sunset

by Dick Kleiner



There are no real westerns on television. And there are very few feature films set in the old West being made today.

What happened? Why did the western ride off into the sunset?

The western was always a Hollywood staple. And, in the past, there were periods when there weren't many cowboy pictures being made. But, always, the wise Hollywood hands would say, "It's a cycle, they'll be back." And they came back.

Now, though, the whole climate seems to have changed. It doesn't look good for the western.

The reason for westerns going thataway isn't easy to pinpoint. But the general consensus is that Hollywood, as always, is responding to a change in the public's taste and appetite in entertainment.

Frank Price, former producer of The Virginian and now president of Universal TV, agrees with that theory.

"It boils down to a consideration of the type of western and the audiences which tend to like them," Price says. "From a TV standpoint, the classic western has little appeal in urban areas and to the younger audience. Therefore, advertisers are just not interested in sponsoring them."

Television must look for the biggest numbers. If one type of show — such as westerns — makes huge segments of the public switch off their TV sets, obviously the TV moguls are going to move on to something else.

In the feature film arena, the same situation applies. The movie audience today, by and large, consists of younger people, in the 18-to-25-year-old bracket. Years ago, the younger people loved cowboy movies; that is no longer true.

Recent western pictures — Kirk Douglas' "Posse" and Richard Brooks' "Bite the Bullet" — tried to circumvent that by being off-beat. "Posse" switched the classic good-guy-bad-guy roles and "Bite the Bullet" was really a chase film set in the West. Still, they were not successes.

Louis L'Amour, today's top selling author whose 54 western novels have been the basis of 33 movies, blames Hollywood's producers for the dearth of westerns.

"The problem isn't with the audience," L'Amour says, "but with the state of mind of the Hollywood producer. They have a success with a disaster movie and, from then on, that's all they want to do, make disaster movies.

"After the success of 'The Godfather,' I must have gotten ten calls from producers who wanted to know if I had a story about a Godfather-like character, set in the old West."

Curiously, whenever a John Wayne movie — a Wayne western — is shown on TV, it commands a high rating. And yet Wayne's latest movies have not done well at the box office.

"Wayne's westerns," says Price, "do well on TV — but not in New York and Los Angeles. Most advertisers want to reach those urban centers. They look at the Wayne figures and that turns them off sponsoring westerns on TV."

Price says that Universal has been trying to develop a western which would appeal to the urban audience. The studio felt it had succeeded with Alias Smith and Jones, but the show was only moderately successful. Price blames its time slot — opposite All In the Family and Flip Wilson — for that semi-failure.

L'Amour thinks westerns will stage another comeback. It is his feeling that there are basic reasons for the long history of these pictures, and those basic reasons still prevail.

"First," he says, "I believe there is something in our national character, maybe even in our genes, that makes us want to read about that era and watch dramas about it. Our ancestors, a thousand years ago, lived next to other people in Asia. Our ancestors were the ones who packed up and moved west to Europe. Their neighbors didn't.

"Our ancestors continued to move west through Europe. Other people stayed put. Our ancestors got to the shores of the Atlantic. Again, it was our ancestors who sailed to the new world, while others didn't.

"Once our ancestors landed on the eastern seaboard, the same process continued. So it was distilled. The ones who moved west were the most adventurous, perhaps the bravest. The need to push westward is in our genes.

"The second reason for our continuing love of westerns is that we all like stories about the man on horseback who can just ride away from his troubles. It's the ultimate freedom."

But L'Amour's feelings are romantic. They run up against Hollywood's crass dollars-and-cents approach. And Hollywood, today, sees and measures the audience and finds they're not interested in the romance of the old West.

"Look at Gunsmoke and Bonanza," says Frank Price. "When they started, roughly 20 years ago, the leads were younger and more attractive. In two decades, they aged. Naturally, they didn't have much appeal to today's younger TV audiences and the miracle is that they lasted as long as they did."

He says that every film made and every TV series made is up against stiff odds before it can succeed. And, today, westerns face even stiffer odds.

"Just the tag 'western' is enough to kill a project these days," Price says.

But L'Amour, whose books have sold more than 42 million copies (his latest is "Over On the Dry Side"), still has high hopes for the future.

"I think westerns on TV and in films will come back," he says. "No matter what the Hollywood producers say, I believe there is an audience for them. Look at the sales of my books — last year between 6 and 7 million copies."

Stamps honor Olympics

The Canada Post Office on Feb. 6 will issue four Olympic commemorative stamps — a set of three depicting the Arts and Culture Program and a fourth marking the XII Olympic Winter Games at Innsbruck, Germany.

Ray Webber of Toronto designed three of the issues — the 50-cent adhesive featuring the Performing Arts, the 25-cent denomination depicting Handicrafts and the 20-cent adhesive portraying Communication Arts. The Innsbruck Winter Games stamp, also a 20-cent denomination, was designed by Rolf Harder of Montreal.

The total production, printed by the Canadian Bank Note Company of Ottawa and Ashton-Potter Limited of Toronto respectively, will bear general tagging and will not be available in any other form.

Collectors desiring first day cancellations should send their requests to "FDC/Olympic Stamps, Philatelic Service, Canada Post Office, Ottawa, Ontario, Canada K1A OB5" enclosing the proper remittance which is the cost of the stamps to be affixed plus a 15-cent service fee for each cover to be affixed with less than 50 cents postage. Pencil in lightly in the upper right hand corner of your envelope which stamp you wish affixed and send your remittance by International Bank Draft payable to "The Receiver General for Canada."

First day cancellations for the U.S. Military Services issue (which I thought was called Continental Uniforms), released July 4, totaled 1,134,831 for the four adhesives. There were 386,736 cancellations for the World Peace Through Law commemorative issued Sept. 30.

Celebrities cash in on tennis

Some movie and television stars have become tennis pros, playing for prize money instead of purely for fun.

The tennis boom has created an increasing demand for stars to appear at tourneys to raise money for charity. Until now the celebrities have been content to pick up a trophy for a winning performance.

Charlton Heston, Lloyd Bridges, Bill Cosby and others have joined Chelmac Productions, an outfit that organizes play-for-pay tournaments.

Chad Everett, star of television's "Medical Center," is a director of the organization, which pits a celebrity and a pro against two other performers and their pros in elimination matches.

"It's not that we need the money," said Everett, who is the driving force behind the new scheme. "The winning team in each tournament gets $2,500. I can't see Chuck Heston making a living by splitting that prize money with his pro.

"But the point is we're taking the social politeness out of the game. The difference between playing for prize money and playing for fun is the same as playing poker for stakes or just for the heck of it.

"Our first tournament raised $27,500 for a private Catholic school. The quality of tennis was altogether different from other pro-celebrity tournaments.

"Everybody played a lot better, more competitive tennis. The crowd enjoyed it more and so did the players."

Everett, a natural athlete who was a football and track flash at his Michigan high school, has been playing tennis only three years. He won the pro-celebrity division last September at the Pacific-Southwest tournament.

So far he has limited the Chelmac star participants to himself, Heston, Bridges, Cosby, Rob Reiner, Jim Franciscus and Chris Connelly.

Others want to join the troupe, but Everett is limiting the group to what he calls "A" players among performers.

Some of the stars who appear on television's "Celebrity Tennis" and at charity tournaments are embarrassingly poor players, who make weekend duffers look like Rod Laver by comparison.

People are anxious to pay to see celebrities play tennis," said Everett, "and I think they ought to be given good, hard competitive matches. Tennis beats the dull old fund-raising banquets.

"It's a service for which Chelmac gets a fee. We even hold a training camp for our players and their pros. It improves all our games."

President of the organization is Mel Irwin, a long-time director of tennis tournaments throughout the world.

"There are about 25 celebrity tournaments a year," Irwin said. "Some of them have involved world-class players. Most of our stars play three or four times a week and have really become fine players.

"The minute a celebrity gets involved in playing for a purse the quality of his game improves immeasurably."

Most of the professionals involved in Chelmac are teaching pros. The big names of the game — Jimmy Connors, Arthur Ashe, John Newcomb — are too busy on the tour to participate.

"That doesn't concern us," said Irwin, "because people really turn out to see stars like Chad and Heston perform at these affairs."

Chelmac calls its tourneys "King of the Hill" championships. Each match advance the winners in a special flight, which eventually will earn the top team some $40,000 according to Irwin.

The stars are taking it seriously, but to top professional players celebrity tennis is still a game for actors and comedians with two left feet.

NBC-TV announces specials for the upcoming season

A movie about Amelia Earhart, a series on the life of Jesus Christ and an anniversary show are part of the upcoming 1976-77 scheduled recently announced by NBC.

Planned for the next year are:

• "Amelia Earhart," a three-hour world premiere movie starring Susan Clark. The movie will focus on the still unresolved disappearance of the famed American aviatrix 39 years ago. The story details the chain of events that preceded Earhart's mysterious disappearance in the Pacific Ocean near Howland Island in 1937 while she attempted a round-the-world flight.

Clark was acclaimed for her recent portrayal of Olympics athlete Mildred (Babe) Didrikson in the TV special "Babe."

• "The Life of Jesus Christ," a series to be presented on six consecutive Sundays during the Easter season of 1977. Laurence Olivier, Anne Bancroft, James Mason, Rod Steiger, Peter O'Toole, Ernest Borgnine, Christopher Plummer, James Earl Jones, James Farentino and Stacy Keach will star.

British actor Robert Powell will portray Christ in the special, currently in production on location in Tunisia. Olivia Hussey will appear as Mary.

• "The First Fifty Years," a four-hour prime-time special marking NBC's 50 years of broadcasting. Orson Welles and Gene Kelly will star in the special to be broadcast on a Sunday night in November. The special will cover entertainment, news and sports broadcast achievements on NBC radio and television.

• "Life Goes to the Movies," a three-hour special on the stars, films and legends of the motion picture industry. The special will feature highlights of outstanding films. The program is being developed from the recently published book, "Life Goes to the Movies." It will focus on 36 years of motion picture industry from the inception of Life magazine in 1936 to its last publication in 1972.

Top directors including Stanley Kubrick and Cecil B. DeMille and producers, Sam Goldwyn, Louis B. Mayer, David O. Selznick and Darryl F. Zanuck will be studied during the special.

CBS examines strengths, weaknesses of the FBI on Monday night special

"CBS Reports: Inside the FBI" examines the myths and realities of FBI agents, their daily routines and their strengths and weaknesses Monday at 9 p.m.

"Who polices the police?" asks news Correspondent Dan Rather. "How did the FBI, an agency dedicated to the law, end up breaking it? What kind of men are behind the Bureau's damaging headlines?"

With these questions in mind, CBS reporters followed FBI agents for six months. They filmed agents in the field and also filmed the FBI's informers. To find out how agents function as criminal investigators, CBS followed two Atlanta G-Men in pursuit of a million-dollar jewel thief.

The broadcast reviews the cases of Attorney Abdeen Jabara and Lost Angeles Times Reporter Jack Nelson, both subjects of extensive FBI investigations although neither has ever been accused of criminal offenses. The broadcast also includes interviews with informers who explain how they became involved with the Bureau.

Vaccaro: a liberated pioneer

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The first new horse opera to hit television screens in years will feature a heroine instead of a hero, which indicates where Hollywood's thinking is these days.

Nor will the western woman be the strong, silent type as lore would have you believe pioneers of both sexes were.

To the contrary, the leading character is a talkative schoolmarm who does her bit to tame the Old West by beating the three "Rs" into the skulls of her students.

Playing the title role in "Sara," which premieres at 7 p.m. Feb. 13 on CBS, is Brenda Vaccaro. She is a fiery beauty from Brooklyn who has distinguished herself in several movies and won an Emmy in 1974 for her performance in "The Shape of Things."

Brenda is an outspoken feminist who lives with Michael Douglas, son of Kirk, who stars in "The Streets of San Francisco."

In as much as Michael spends most of his time by the Golden Gate, Brenda's new show will play hob with their living arrangements. But that's show biz.

Brenda says she will not play the cliched horse opera school teacher, demure, sunbonneted and put-upon by guys in black hats.

"The setting is Colorado in 1870," she said in her dressing room the other day. A makeup man was applying powder to her face. A hairdresser worked on her mass of tangled curls.

"What this series proves is that outrageous women existed in every era. Sara is a Philadelphia gal who got tired of the dull, comfortable life in the east.

"Sara's not interested in getting married (at least one characteristic she shares with Brenda) or working for her relatives (there's another), so she heads west on her own."

Brenda lit a cigarette and quickly painted her lips for the next scene.

"Most western women in movies and television just stand around and wring their hands waiting for the men to fight. Sara is different.

"I spoke to a knowledgeable UCLA historian about the period and the sort of women who helped settle the west. Most females who came to the frontier were hookers. Some came looking for husbands.

"In those days women were scarce in the mountains and prairies. Even the ugliest women in the territory could find a man. The guys gave up their squaws to marry girls from the east, no matter how bad they were.

"But Sara is a liberated woman for her time. I'm sort of inventing her as we go along. We only began shooting the series Dec. 15.

"It's really interesting playing a period character. She's a rebel, impulsive and determined. I'm making her a lot of fun. There will be plenty of humor mixed with the drama."

Brenda was reluctant to accept the role when it was first offered her. Except for shady ladies and an occasional saloon owner, television's western women have been traditionally passive.

"I wasn't excited with the idea because even if Sara was to be a rebel I was afraid CBS had in mind a peachy simplistic woman. But I remembered the movie 'McCabe and Mrs. Miller' and thought I could bring the same forcefulness to Sara.

"She's controversial without trying. In those days it was scandalous for a woman to sit astride a horse. They rode side-saddle, but Sara ignores such conventions.

"She wears a man's buckskin frock coat and lets her hair fly. In those days women wore their hair in prim buns."

Fortunately, Brenda, though born in Brooklyn, was reared in Texas. She's ridden horses most of her life.

"This is the most colorful role I've ever played," she concluded. "And if the scripts are good I hope we enjoy a long run."

Could you please print a picture of the actress who plays Gabe Kaplan's wife on the ABC series, "Welcome Back, Kotter"? Also, print some background information on her.

M.B.

Before deciding to go to California (from New York), Marcia Strassman (Julie Kotter) was concentrating on a career in singing and acting. Her first break came when she won the lead in the off-Broadway musical, "Best Foot Forward." After making nine commercials, she left for the west coast.

Marcia chose to concentrate on acting and she got guest star billing on "Ironside," her first TV role. Later, she guest starred in "Marcus Welby, M.D.," "Police Story" and seven episodes of "M*A*S*H." She also appeared in the film, "Changes." Marcia lives in Hollywood with a canine companion, "Miss Lillian."

New exhibit traces impact of technology on life today.

An exhibition tracing the impact of American science and technology is now open at Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry.

The new exhibit tells of the discoveries, inventions and innovations in 12 fields of science, technology and industry from colonial days to the present. The 12 areas covered include agriculture and food, architecture and constructions, chemistry, communications, consumer industries, electronics, energy, machinery, medicine and biological sciences, metals and other materials, physics and astronomy and transportation.

The exhibit also shows how progress has contributed to the growth of the nation and the American life-style. Film, slide presentations, historic artifacts, models and dioramas illustrate the story. The exhibit also shows how the ideas and goals of scientists and inventors were influenced by the time they lived.

The recently opened "Illinois: Land of Innovation" exhibit tells of the contributions of Illinois citizens to science and technology. The Bicentennial program continues through December, 1977.

Cycles on display

Motorcycle dealers in the area will exhibit their cycles today and Sunday at Countryside Mall, Northwest Hwy. and Countryside Dr., Palatine.

The show, from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., features members of the EEZ-Alongs, a local cycle club. Admission is free.

Davis to star in series

Mac Davis will star in a new one-hour weekly musical variety series on NBC later this season.

Davis was named Entertainer of the Year by the Academy of Country Music in 1975 and the Most Popular Male Singer in the People's Choice awards. He has headlined four specials on NBC and previously starred in a series that was cancelled in May, 1975.

Shelby Lyman on chess

Through the decades, the chess scene has always had its share of hustlers who prey on the grandiose expectations of others. In Manhattan, the area around Times Square is still a site of such goings-on.

For those who are unfamiliar with lowest depths of chess experience, here is a typical confrontation:

The hustler, one of the strongest players in the city, is playing a young man obviously from out-of-town. After a few moves, the big city predator praises tne newcomer lavishly:

"You must be some kind of champion," he says. "You are playing so well."

Reluctantly the shy victim accedes. "Yes, well, I am champion of . . . ah . . . Northern Minnesota."

"I knew it," says the hustler.

And then, a few moves later, the denouement. The New Yorker slams his queen down on a key square and thunders, not so sweetly, "You lose, idiot!"

Hint and Explanation for BEGINNER'S CORNER, Diagram 1: The pinned black king bishop pawn is the crucial factor (as in the previous column). A surprisingly abrupt finish.

If you are to live on this planet and play chess, there are few greater achievements than to win the USSR Championship. The players of the Soviet Union, taken as a group, are superior to the rest of the world combined.

In the just concluded 1975 event, 27-year-old Boris Gulko had a 1½ point lead with four rounds to go. But he stumbled badly. He lost two and drew two of those games to finish in a second place tie behind veteran Tigran Petrosian.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

When your partner uses Blackwood and you happen to be void of some suit you should have some way of showing that you have that specific first-round control.

The Jacoby method of handling such a situation is to bid six, not five, in the suit you would normally respond in if you consider that your void is a valuable one.

If South were void of either spades or diamonds, he would simply respond five diamonds to his partner's Blackwood. But his missing suit happened to be clubs and West had bid clubs. So South jumped right to six diamonds to show one ace and an apparently important void.

This six-diamond bid made it easy for North to bid seven hearts and it was just as easy for South to wrap up 13 tricks.

Chicago library hosts Jefferson tribute

"The Jefferson Heritage," a tribute to Thomas Jefferson and other American statesmen, will be performed Feb. 4 and 5 at the Chicago Public Library Cultural Center.

The shows will be at 12:15 and 7 p.m. Feb. 4 and 7 p.m. Feb. 5. Admission is free to the program, on the second floor at Randolph Street Auditorium, Michigan Avenue and Randolph Street.

A series of half-hour radio programs titled "The Jefferson Heritage" was first presented in 1953. The radio scripts have been incorporated into the hour-long performance.

In the show Jefferson is portrayed from a new viewpoint - not as president but as a common man who wrote the Declaration of Independence and made united states out of a vast country. The production is made possible by a grant from the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration, the Illinois Bicentennial Commission and the Friends of the Chicago Public Library.

Hand bookbinding demonstrated Feb. 7 at Chicago Public Library

Hand bookbinding will be demonstrated at the Chicago Historical Society February 7 from 1 to 4 p.m.

Gary Frost, a professional hand bookbinder in the conservation department at the Newberry Library, and Joan Flasch, who teaches a hand bookbinding course with Frost at the School of the Art Institute, will discuss both tradition hand-bound, leather-covered books and modern cased, flat-back books.

Flasch will demonstrate a simple form of hand bookbinding — the cased, flat-back book — to introduce the "anatomy" of book binding. Frost will explain and show samples of various books bound in more traditional leather covers with "laced-in" bindings, a method that began in the 8th century and was common through the 18th century. A supply list and bibliography will be provided.

The Chicago Historical Society is at Clark Street and North Avenue. Admission is $1.00 for adults, 50¢ for children aged 6 through 17 and 25¢ for senior citizens.

Divorced, independent and outspoken

Maureen Reagan is no Susan Ford

"I'm so sure Dad will be nominated and elected the only thing I wonder about is what to wear at his inauguration," said Ronald Reagan's daughter, Maureen.

Last year the former California governor's 35-year-old daughter said she hoped her father wouldn't run. Now she's all for it.

"I was opposed to his candidacy because I knew it would mean eight years of his life in the world's toughest job," she explained. "If I thought it meant only a year of campaigning it might be different. But he's sure to win."

Maureen, an actress, feminist and former radio talk show hostess, isn't an objective observer. She campaigned vigorously for her father in his gubernatorial elections and is a canny politician herself.

"Dad is running against an incumbent in a minority party," she said. "That's not easy. But I'm supremely confident he will win the Republican nomination and then the presidency.

"I haven't done any campaigning yet. But after the first two primaries I'll get busy on the campaign trail."

Maureen is Reagan's daughter by his earlier marriage to Oscar-winning actress Jane Wyman. She is a composite of both parents, tall 5-foot-9, blonde and slimmed down by 30 pounds recently.

Her boyfriend is actor-dancer Gene Nelson. Curiously, Nelson and her father costarred with Virginia Mayo at Warner Bros. many years ago in "She's Working Her Way Through College."

Should Reagan make it to the White House, Maureen will be a marked departure from such recent presidential offspring as the Ford, Nixon and Johnson girls, not to mention Margaret Truman.

She is a divorcee, independent and outspoken. She has been a saloon singer, featured in Las Vegas, acted on stage, in television shows and commercials. Maureen recently completed a dramatic role in an episode of "Marcus Welby, M.D."

Maureen doesn't know whether her father's candidacy will help or hinder her career.

"There is a definite political polarization in Hollywood," she said of the largely Democratic movieland population. "During the campaign I can see producers not wanting to hire me to promote the Reagan name.

"But so far it has been business as usual. It might be different once Dad is president.

"If television and movie producers discover suddenly that my 15 years experience is exactly what they are looking for as of Jan. 20, 1977 — Inauguration Day — I won't say no to them.

"I will say that in the past month and a half, since Dad announced his candidacy, my personal life has been somewhat magnified. I've always been guarded and protective about my privacy and I expect to keep that up.

"Probably the biggest change will be the constant companionship of the Secret Service. I've talked to some of the men assigned to my father and they try to be as invisible as possible. It's a small inconvenience."

Maureen is on good terms with her stepmother, former actress Nancy Reagan, and is a frequent visitor to her father's home near the ocean and at his ranch near Santa Barbara.

She also is close to her mother with whom she will work locally, Jan. 31, on the "Stop Arthritis Telethon," for which they raised $300,000 last year.

Asked what her mother thought of the Reagan presidential aspirations, Maureen laughed.

"Mother has never said a word about Dad's political life. Not while he was governor and not now," she said. "Mother doesn't know anything about politics."

Maureen, on the other hand, is a knowledgable campaigner and willing to stump for her father.

"He can't miss," Maureen concluded. "And by the time the inaugruation rolls around I'll have my dress all picked out."

Business exhibit to open at history society Feb. 7

"The Business of America," the sixth in a series of nine monthly exhibits in connection with the nation's Bicentennial, will open Feb. 7 at the Chicago Historical Society.

The exhibit, which closes March 8, deals with the establishment of large and small businesses, the problems of business regulation and the consumer-ecology movement in Chicago. Business photographs, maps, advertisements, price lists and account books dating back to 1823 are shown in order to depict the history of Chicago's firms. Founders of the city's largest firms are commemorated including Philip D. Armour, Marshall Field, George M. Pullman, Richard W. Sears and A. Montgomery Ward.

The exhibit, on the ground floor, also explores some of the conflicts generated by the need for increased industrial production as well as pollution controls today.

The exhibit is open Monday through Saturday 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Sunday 12:30 to 5 p.m. Admission is $1 for adults, 50 cents for children (6-17) and 25 cents for senior citizens. Members of the historical society are admitted free. The society is located at the south end of Lincoln Park at Clark Street and North Avenue.

Winter at the zoo

Try something new this winter. Visit the zoo.

Some of the animals at Chicago's Lincoln Park Zoo are now enjoying their favorite season and enjoying it out of doors. On a visit in the winter, you can see polar bears jumping into any icy pool and sea lions and penguins, which swim in a heated pool. Siberian tigers, mountain lions, snow leopards and Arctic foxes are always in their outdoor cages in the winter. A number of wild birds in the zoo's rookery also stay outside.

The zoo is open every day. Admission is free.
